PREFACE

Sincere thanks are due to the late Professor Helmer Smith of Uppsala for interest and encouragement. Also to Professor Giuseppe Tucci of Rome who kindly let me use Tibetan texts in his own library, texts hardly accessible elsewhere in Europe. Also to Professor Ferdinand Lessing of Berkeley and his assistant Mr. A. Wayman for valuable help. Also to the Royal Library in Copenhagen who afforded me access to one of its bsTan'gyur-volumes in Uppsala.

Doctor Gösta Montell and the Sven Hedin Foundation made it possible to publish this set of scrolls acquired during one of Sven Hedin's expeditions.

I wish to thank very specially Professor James Carney of Dublin for his great kindness in giving some of his time to read through and correct my English. Also Assistant Professor Nils Simonsson for help with the proofs.

The spelling of Tibetan words is not consistent. Well known names and other words occurring frequently in western literature are spelt in the established way. The other words are spelt according to each source. To facilitate reading the syllables forming one Tibetan word are joined if the word occurs several times.

INTRODUCTION

*May the sun, the moon, and the multitude of stars fall on the ground,
But I shall not die as I am now, an ordinary being.*

(Lalitavistara, Walleser's translation)

In Buddha's times, we are told, there was a great snake that, wishing to become a monk, took human form and went to live among the monks as one of them. But he was discovered when asleep — for in sleep he reassumed his reptile form — and brought before Buddha. Buddha's judgement was that he could not remain a monk. This life he must spend as a snake, but born again, he might be born in human shape, and then attain perfection; for, as a rule, in human shape alone can perfection be achieved.

To gain perfection (and with perfection power over death, and the ability to stand above the laws of nature) has been a common wish of people in different parts of the earth. Those believed to have attained this state were held in high esteem. In India such were called "siddhas", perfect ones or "mahāsiddhas", great perfect ones. The equivalents for "siddha" in Tibetan and in Uigurian are "grub thob" and "bakši" respectively. In common speech the word siddha often merely means a very holy man, a saint.

Among the Indian siddhas a group of eighty four is especially venerated by adherents of the Buddhist Vajrayāna as well as by Śivaïtes. They play an important rôle in the dances.¹ Some of the group are claimed as founders and spiritual ancestors by various schools or sects, and to a number of them highly valued texts are ascribed. In legends their performance often touches upon the fantastic. They are invoked and pictures and statuettes of them are held in veneration. Not unlike our own medieval saints a siddha may be depicted with an implement of his trade on earth or with some symbol of his connection with other worlds.

This trait is not the only one the siddhas have in common with our saints. The likeness goes deeper. They all work for the welfare of mankind. They despise wordly rank and achievement and only value spiritual greatness. Spiritual development is not impaired by low descent or sex — some follow menial trades and many lists of the group of Eighty Four Siddhas contain four women. Their relationship to worlds beyond our earth is heavily stressed, and miracles follow in their trail.

Naturally there are differences. The most striking is perhaps the conception of how death is conquered.

The Christian imagines his saint as dying "in Domino". Redeemed by Christ's blood he passes through death to Heaven. The body is left behind and miracles may happen near the grave. — Not so the siddha. Generally he does not die in the usual sense of the word. Complete with body he passes at will from this earth to another abode. As the Tibetan legends say he "goes skywards" (mkha' la gśegs). Traces of this conception can however be found in our religious world too. According to the Old Testament the prophet Elia was taken from this earth alive in a fiery chariot. By a canonical letter we are informed that Enoch was transferred to Paradise without enduring death.² Both incidents were vividly present in the mind of medieval man, transmitted by calendars, pictures and texts. Paulinus Nolanus beholds Elia and Enoch ascending on the Milky Way:

raptus quadriiugo penetrat sub aere curru
Elias et solido cum corpore praeuius Enoch and in a Swedish sequentia written by the bishop Nicolaus Hermanni († 1391) for the feast of the martyr Botvidus the author alludes to Enoch. Recently the bodily assumption of the Blessed Virgin was made a dogma. Similarly Saint John the Evangelist was believed to have reached heaven without experiencing death. But these examples are exceptions rather than the rule.

A saviour in the Christian sense has no place in the siddha's scheme of salvation. Though led by a teacher and frequently helped by non-human agents the siddha has to work out his own salvation. A single life-time rarely suffices to become Perfect and he may have to strive after perfection through many incarnations.

Besides these essential differences there are differences in degree. The life of the Indian saint tends to be more extreme, and the tales told about him are more horrifying. It is true that we find some episodes in the Vitae Patrum repugnant, but they are mild when compared, say, with the eating of corpses in a cemetery recounted in the legends of siddhas. Similarly our wonder-tales seem but faint echoes of the eastern legends. Reading these we understand why the siddhas are so often called sorcerers or magicians.

Common points can of course be found. When the siddha Birvapa-Virūpa shows his power over the sun this reminds us strongly of what the Lord's servant Joshua does in the Old Testament. The flying ascetic and the writhing monsters illustrating tales of siddhas are as a rule not found in our western legends, but suggestions of these elements are found in the legend of Saint Anthony the Hermit, and others.

The worship of the siddhas belongs to the tantric phase of Buddhist and non-Buddhist communities.³ The siddhas are invoked, praised and imitated. The Buddhist worshipper does not ask for his saint's personal help as we do, for having left this earth the siddha takes no further interest in earthly affairs. Nobody can claim him. True, Nāropa helps Marpa when the latter is in need of scriptures. But otherwise the siddha's influence is more of the nature of the Holy Scriptures as defined by Saint Jerome: through "praecepta et mandata, testimonia et exempla".

Bhattacharyya sees the origin of tantrism in the cult of Guhyasamāja much appreciated in Padmavajra's Guhyasiddhi. He thinks that king Indrabhūti is responsible for its early development.

² Regum L. 4, 2, 11. Hebr. 11, 5.

³ Cf. S. B. Dasgupta. An introduction to Tāntric Buddhism. 1950.

In a limited sense the tantras are esoteric methods for realizing the supreme goal: to become a buddha. These methods and practices include the practising of the six great virtues or pāramitās: from charity (dāna) to knowledge (prajñā). The aspirant passes through ten stages or bodhisattva-bhūmis: from the initial stage of joy (pramuditā) to the last stage where he is enveloped in the cloud of true teaching or dharmamegha.

If we go through the legends of the siddhas, where their teachings are dealt with in popular form, these teachings are rather uniform. They are the converse of the life led by common men. Material achievements are worthless. The one thing worth striving for is freedom from earthly entanglements. To be free, to be "void" makes the Great Change. The means towards this aim is chiefly meditation. Initiations help and mark stages in development — but they do not imply final salvation. A deity may be consulted as a helper towards perfection — but is no saviour. The pupil is guided by a teacher who gives simple precepts. No philosophical discussions are needed. A shoemaker may be taught by meditation on his tools. But before perfection can be attained all pride of caste and learning, all enjoyment of luxury must be overcome. A brahmin must be able to consume pork and alcohol in the cemetery.

When a siddha has reached perfection he is in possession of the siddhis or "the powers". What do they consist of? In Sumpamkhanpo's work we read the lines:

sa 'og bsgrod dañ ral gri dañ /
chad bčad phan 'dogs gñis dag dañ /
ril bu mig sman gter rnam dañ /
rkañ mgyog bčud len grub pa brgyad /

Grünwedel reproduces a somewhat different reading:

sa 'og bsgrod dañ ral gri dañ /
char bčad phan 'dogs gñis ka dañ /
ril bu mig sman gter rnam dañ /
rkañ 'gyogs dag kyañ bčud kyis len / and translates:

Unter die Erde gehen und das Zauberschwert, Anfechtung-Aufheben und Gefügig-Machen, die Kugelchen-Siddhi, die Augensalbe und das Schätzefinden, Siebenmeilenstiefel: diese alle sind durch das Amṛta zu erlangen.
To walk underground, the sword,
To un-charm, to make of use,
Pill, eye-medicine and treasure, swiftness-boots: through Amṛta.

Schiefner enumerates the following eight siddhis: pill, eyemedicine, underground-walking, sword, flying through the air, invisibility, immortality and "inner victory". As interchangeable siddhis he mentions: swiftness-boots (Schnellauf), and the elixir. In his introduction to the Sādhana-mālā Bhattacharyya enumerates the eight great siddhis. He begins with the sword-siddhi: khaḍga, añjana, pādālepa, antardhāna, rasa-rasāyana, khecara, bhūcara, pātāla.*

* Tāranātha, Edelsteinmine 159. — Tāranātha, Čhos'byun 304.

Pictures of mahāsiddhas have been found in ancient caves. Single siddhas, painted and modelled, have been described by westerners who have visited lamaistic temples, and both paintings and statuettes of siddhas have been brought to the West.

When painted a complete set of the Eighty Four Magicians, says Hackin in "Asiatic Mythology", consists of seven scrolls.⁵ On each of the scrolls which he describes some of these magicians are grouped round a picture of a man who is not a "siddha" in the usual sense of the word, but a buddha or some holy lama of later times. Hackin reproduces two scrolls of such a set (not quite complete) now preserved in Paris. In his edition of legends of the Eighty Four Sorcerers Grünwedel reproduces two scrolls preserved in Hamburg besides single pictures of some siddhas.⁶ There exist also single scrolls where all eighty four form the background for some holy personage occupying the centre.

The names of siddhas and the order of picture-subscriptions in the Paris-scrolls and in the Hamburg-scrolls may easily be related to the heroes of the legends translated by Grünwedel and to the order in which they are found there. The same names and on the whole the same order are found in lists of eighty four siddhas published by Rāhula Sāṅkṛtyāyana and Giuseppe Tucci.⁷ Approximately the same order is observed in volume 48 of the Paris-Tangyur containing works of siddhas.⁸ A list of the Eighty Four Mahāsiddhas provided by a newar-priest of Patan (Nepal) and used locally conforms to the same order. From the scanty description available we cannot decide whether the eighty four siddhas with Uigurian inscriptions found by Grünwedel belong to the same tradition.⁹ — These lists and sets of siddhas are headed by the siddha Luyipa from Magadha who is immediately followed by Lilapa. The last siddha of this set is Vyāli-Byāli. These lists contain eighty men and four women. One of the women-siddhas is the renowned king Indrabhūti's equally renowned sister Lakṣmīkarā. The legends telling of this group of siddhas name as their author Abhayadattaśrī ("Abhayaśrī"), and as the translator into the Tibetan language sMongrubśesrab. As to the author Grünwedel quotes the work of Sumpamkhanpo, where a pupil of Vajrāsana is said to have composed stories of the Eighty Four Siddhas.¹⁰

¹⁰ Grünwedel, Idikutschari 168 ff. — Grünwedel does not give all the names. He mentions a Ciluka-Caluki among the siddhas and speaks of two of them wearing the serpent-headress. None of these is, however, the first of the set. Grünwedel made some additions in his "Altbuddhistische Kultstätten in Chinesisch-Turkestan" 1912, 212. Number 8 plays the flute, number 51 is holding a bowl — not a sword as said earlier. Number 52 is depicted with the sun — the same story about Padmasambhava. Cf. T'oung Pao 1896, 538 ff. — and number 55 is sitting squarely on an elephant. Number 66 is brown (not grey) and has a dog (Kukkuripa) and number 73 holds a hammer (Kambaripa). Number 79 has a washboard (Dhobī) — Grünwedel says that two of these siddhas are depicted with serpent-headresses. One of them very probably represents Nāgārjuna. Number 5 is a potter, number 2 is shown on a ship which reminds us of the Karupa-Karupaka to be spoken of presently.

There are both texts and pictures of siddhas who do not conform to the tradition spoken of. The Tangyur contains a treatise about the appearance of eighty four siddhas beginning with Luyipa and Lilapa but afterwards differing from the names and the order of the names found in the stories. Much akin to this is another text in the "rje bcun bla ma dam pa phuñ thañ 'jam pa'i dbyaṅs dkon mēhog bstan pa'i sgron ma'i dpal bzañ po'i gsuñ 'bum ja pa'i dkar čhag bžugs so". Giuseppe Tucci in his Tibetan Painted Scrolls has published a list of eighty four siddhas taken from a collection of invocations found in the Tangyur. These invocations give the name of rDorjegdānpa (Vajrāsana) as the author. No translator is mentioned. By Cordier the author is identified with Ratnākara-gupta. In the text he is called "lama".¹¹

This Vajrāsana-list also consists of eighty four siddhas but it is not like the other ones. All the eighty four magicians are men. The first is Klugrubsñiṅpo (Nāgārjunagarbha) followed immediately by Āryadeva. The last magician is Metogpa. Three of the siddhas mentioned in these invocations but absent in the "stories" are painted on a scroll formerly in Peking and now in private possession in the United States.¹² Some of the siddhas found in the invocations but not in the "stories" are present in the pictures of single siddhas reproduced by Grünwedel.¹³ Probably the "Buddhist saints and lamas" — frescoes with inscriptions seen by Francke in the lhakhañ of the Alchi Monastery — form part of our particular set of eighty four siddhas.¹⁴ All eighty four magicians of the invocations are represented on a set of scrolls bought in Peking and now preserved in the Ethnographical Museum in Stockholm. The set is reproduced here and treated of for the first time.¹⁵

The set consists of thirteen scrolls,¹⁶ painted on cotton. Each painting is framed: 1. with green cord, now faded; 2. with dark red silk wrought with gold; 3. with yellow silk with gold. The whole is mounted on scarlet silk with gold threads woven into it. Each scroll is protected by a veil of thin khatagsilk held in place by two ribbons of yellow silk, now faded.

¹⁴ A. H. Francke, Antiquities of Indian Tibet. Archaeological Survey of India. New Imperial Series. Vol. XXXVIII. Calcutta 1914, 91. — Unfortunately Francke enumerates only some of the saints: Klugrub, Āryadeva, Nārōpa, Tilipa, Loipa, Kumara, Dharmakīrti, Kamala, Ananta, Shantipa, E(n)trabodhe, Zlabagragpa and Kundga'sñiṅpo. These names can be found in our set of the eighty four siddhas in Stockholm.

¹⁶ If the single scroll now in the possession of Mr. Minkenhof (cf. Excursus I) once belonged to a complete set of eighty four siddhas this set probably covered considerably more scrolls than the set now preserved in Stockholm, as only three siddhas are reproduced — about half of the number of siddhas on a scroll of the Stockholm-set. — There seem to exist groups of less than eighty four siddhas as well. Cf. Taranathae de Doctrinae Buddhicae in India Propagatione Narratio. Ed. A. Schiefner. 1868, Transl. 182. — Also a cave in Nepal on the road from Kathmandu to Kuti is named after "Eighty Mahāsiddhas" only. And the third Pančhenlama describes a vision, in which bConkhapa once showed himself surrounded by Eighty Mahāsiddhas; Grünwedel, Sam-bhala 29.

The names of these scrolls, though sometimes badly deformed, as well as the order in which they are presented conform to one of the lists published by Tucci and drawn from the invocations just mentioned.

In our scrolls the siddhas are not grouped around any buddha or any other holy personage. The centre of each scroll except the first one is occupied by one of the siddhas themselves painted on a slightly larger scale. The siddhas in the centre of each scroll are as follows, the first name being taken from the scrolls and the second from the "litany":

I. Klugrub — Klusgrubsñiṅpo	VIII. Putaloki — Sataloki
II. Luyipa — Luyipa	IX. Minadapa — Minadapa
III. Kukuripa — Kukuripa	X. Khyurapa — Karnapa
IV. Tantrapa — Tantrapa	XI. Caṇḍali — Caṇḍali
V. bZaṅpopa — bZaṅpopa	XII. Thogsmed — Thogpamedpa
VI. Śantipa — Śantipa	XIII. Kaladake — Kaladage
VII. Kama — Kamala

The only real difference between the scrolls and the litany is that the scrolls contain an eighty fifth siddha. He is called Blama rDorjegdanpa. As the litany names a Blama rDorjegdanpa as its author these two may safely be identified. The man in question is probably the same as the Blama rDorjegdanpa we meet elsewhere. A "Bla ma rDo rje gdan pa (Vajrāsana-guru)" is mentioned as one of the translators of the "señ ge sgra'i sgrub thabs" in the Tangyur.¹⁷ As the author of this work we are given the name of Candragomin who occupies number 20 in our thaṅkas (Candrapa) and in the invocations. A "bla ma rdo rje gdan pa" is further said to have composed the "phags pa de bzin gśegs pa'i gcug tor nas byuñ ba'i gdugs dkar po čan gyis mi thub pa žes bya ba'i ñe bar bsad pa" which was translated by the author himself and by the Bari-locaba.¹⁸

In fact Tāranātha knows of three sages in Buddhagayā who are called rDorjegdanpa — Vajrāsana(guru).¹⁹ The first or Mahāvajrāsana was a teacher in Vikramaśīla after Dīpaṅkaraśrījñāna who left for Tibet in 1042. Three Vajrāsana are also known to the "rjes gnañ . . . thob brgyud" of the "thob yig gsal ba'i me loñ" of Jaya Paṇḍita. Here they are enumerated between Jetāri and the Bari-locaba Rinčhengrags. The line of transmission is: sañs rgyas rdo rje 'chañ — phyag na rdo rje — je tā ri — dgra las rnam rgyal — rdo rje gdan pa čhe 'briñ čhuñ gsum — ba ri lo ca ba rin čhen grags — sa čhen kun sñiñ.²⁰ Sumpamkhanpo again mentions two rDorjegdanpa — čhe čhuñ — between Jetāri and Pañchen Puñśrīnas Bari-locaba.²¹

The second Vajrāsana Grünwedel identifies with Ratnākaraśānti. And we might as well mention that the great Tibetan Marpa met one Vajrāsana in India who made him teach the Vinaya to two novices.²²

deva, and is identified with Amoghavajra by Cordier²³ Lacking, as we do, for accessible Lives of these persons we have to be satisfied with a few dates and suggestions. If the Śantipa who occupies number 34 in our set of thankas really is identical with the first abbot of bSamyas as suggested, none of the "three Vajrāsana" occupies any number of the Stockholm-set but the last number 85.

There can be little doubt about the invocations being the source and inspiration of the painter, — the first painter of the set. One significant detail pointing to this fact is the occurrence of a Thugsdam in our scrolls. The invocations mention the Thugsdam in connection with a number of siddhas. In four cases — number 9, 43, 66 and 81 — the name of the Thugsdam is not given though a Thugsdam is mentioned. Thirteen times the name is given. In ten of the thirteen cases the Thugsdam is adequately depicted in the scroll: gSañ'dus in number 13, Migyoba in 60, Thugsrjesgrolma in 62, rTamgrin in 70, sGrolma in 72, bDemchog in 76, Byamspa in 78, dGyespardorje in 80, gŚinrjedmarpo in 82, and Kharsāpañi in 83. Once, in number 56, the Thugsdam seems to have been represented by his (sPyanrasgzigs) śakti. Twice the Thugsdam mentioned in the invocation is not depicted at all. The upturned faces of the two siddhas in question — number 36 and 58 however suggest an object. Possibly there was no room available. The corner where Avadhūti (number 62) sits is so crammed with trees and fruits that the painter had to put the Thugsdam sGrolma on the other side of the scroll.²⁴ On the whole the first illustrator of the invocations seems to have followed the text closely enough.

Somehow the invocations of Vajrāsana remind us of our medieval rhythmical litanies such as that composed by Ratpertus though they are far more explicit. Every siddha is treated in four lines. Every line consists of seven syllables. The third line invariably gives the name of the siddha, and the fourth line contains the invocation proper: "I bow down to the lama." According to the length of the siddha's name the third line varies slightly: "called" is expressed by "žes bya ba yi" or by "žes bya ba'i" or by "žes bya'i". From the first line we frequently learn the caste to which the man belonged, and the occupation or trade that was his as an individual. The second line may tell how he strove for perfection, which Thugsdam he chose, and how he left this earth. Sometimes these two lines are crammed with information. When the siddha in question is known from other sources as for instance the great Asaṅga we find that the author of the invocations gives essential and significant facts of the siddha's life. Sometimes however the information is vague and does not facilitate identification.

The vocabulary is necessarily limited. While the loan-word Nilapa (indigo-maker) is used as a personal name, the trade of the same siddha is denoted by the term "rams mkhan" (indigo-maker). "mkhan" occurs frequently when the personal occupation of the siddha is mentioned (lus). So Luipa is a "yig mkhan" and rTogrcepa a "śiñ mkhan", scribe and carpenter respectively. Among the castes we find those of the shoemakers — lham mkhan rigs —, the wood gatherers — śiñ thun rigs —, the heretics — mu stegs rigs —, also the tharu'i rigs, which possibly denotes the aborigines of the Tarai in Nepal, or the "border land people".

As a rule the name of the siddha is better preserved in the "litany" than in the scroll. In fact it could not easily be changed when once part of the line of seven syllables. Names in inscriptions, or in prose in general, are more likely to suffer corruption.

²³ Cordier III 225—226 (vol. 83, 70, 73, 76).

²⁴ This vision is distinctly descending and therefore cannot belong to any of the siddhas depicted at the bottom. — As to the shape of the Green sGrolma cf. Grünwedel, Mythologie 129.

Several names are trade-names, nick-names or names denoting the country of origin. The individual in question might somewhere else be called by another name. Many, and recently Giuseppe Tucci, have pointed out the difficulties of identifying a siddha. They are not few.

First of all several men may be called by one and the same name. The same name frequently appears in a religious school for members of different generations. On the other hand one man may be called by different names. A Sanskrit name and its Tibetan translation might be misunderstood as names of different persons. With the exception of the nick-names already mentioned and trade-names a new name is conferred upon an initiandus at every initiation — or “baptism” as Tucci calls it. In the legend of the Tibetan poet-saint Milaraspa this conferring of a new name is described in detail. A block-print preserved in Oslo shows a picture of Milaraspa where his initiation-name is subscribed instead of the more usual “Mila” or “Milaraspa”. Also several siddhas may be considered incarnations of one and the same personage, e.g. of Nāgārjuna.²⁵ Names may also be shortened. A man called Señgepa or Śantipa here may elsewhere have a longer name containing these syllables too. A siddha called by a longer and a shorter name or a siddha called by different names²⁶ might in the course of tradition split up into two or even more siddhas. Nevertheless the name of a siddha and even the remembrance of some small sect he belonged to may have disappeared altogether.

When we now try to identify the siddhas we do it knowing full well that much remains to be done and that identifications are necessarily tentative.

Three groups can be conveniently distinguished: a group of siddhas common to the scrolls (litany) and the stories (Grünwedel), a group extant in the scrolls (litany) not found in the stories but found in other sources, and a third group found in the scrolls (litany) but up to now not identified. The first group contains 38 siddhas (the first number gives the place in the litany, the number in brackets the place in the “stories”):

The third and last group consists of 12 mahāsiddhas:

30	Marmelha (Marmelha)	76	Kubuce (Kuburca)
63	Kadnāpa (Carapa)	77	Señgepa (Señgepa)

74	Hilapa (Hilapa)	84	Mirtogpa (Metogpa)

Not all the identifications of the siddhas in the first and the second group are safe. Names like Śantipa and Señgepa are difficult to trace because they may be only part of a name.

Some of the siddhas are seemingly popular figures, with lengthy individual legends. Several are represented in the "Pantheons". A few are enumerated in the non-Buddhist Sādhanamālā and in the Haṭhayogapradipikā. Others are less known. To some caves are dedicated. Some are mentioned among the spiritual ancestors of the great religious leaders as the Dalailama and the lCaṅskya Rolpa'irdorje.

Judging from the verses of the litany the third group of our siddhas has not any peculiar feature distinguishing it from the other groups. True the Red gŚinrje has not been mentioned in connection with the other groups but is mentioned here, and some trades are new.

Compared with the first group the second group of siddhas contains some persons usually not counted as siddhas but rather as learned men and pillars of the buddhist church. Such are Dharmakīrti and Asaṅga. Still the litany and the scrolls in Stockholm are not the only collection of mahāsiddhas containing such persons. So we find Dharmakīrti (Čhoskyigragspa) and Vasubandhu (dByiggnēn) in a Description of the 84 siddhas in some editions (or some copies of editions) of the bsTan'gyur, treated in Excursus II.

Our series has, however, one really striking feature: the beginning.

Fig. 3. thabs šes sde snod dgoñs šar gser gliñ pa
(Grünwedel, Geschichten)

At the head of our scrolls stands Klugrub, in the litany (usually more trustworthy) called Klusgrubsñiñpo. In the first scroll he is pictured with a headdress of serpents, sitting decorously on a cushioned throne. Before him rises the nāga-king presenting him with a bowl. The name Klusgrubsñiñpo is, as Grünwedel points out, given to an author in the bsTan'gyur (whom Grünwedel thinks is the Nāgabodhi of "story" 76).²⁷ This Nāgabodhi does not elsewhere appear in our scrolls or in the litany, as the Nāgabodhi of these sources is identical with "the cattle-herd". The bowl of nectar presented by the nāga-king in our scroll would rather imply the tantric Nāgārjuna of story number 16 where we read about the preparation of the elixir. But whatever his origin his appearance in the picture is far from suggesting a tantric in the more eccentric sense of the word. He rather reminds us of the great founder of the Mahāyāna Nāgārjuna who is said to have got the Prajñāpāramitā from the Nāgas,²⁸ and to have died on the Śrīparvata.²⁹ This Klugrub-Klusgrubsñiñpo is in the first scroll accompanied by Āryadeva, who sits a little lower in a manner suggesting the pupil or disciple. Neither is he dressed in tantric garb. The whole first scroll gives a marked high-church impression. One is reminded of the Pantheon of 360 reproduced by Clark, and beginning with Nāgārjuna and Āryadeva. The author of the litany lays stress on the fact that the siddha Śakyabśesgñen "followed Klusgrub", and that the siddha Zlabagragspa "had Klusgrub in mind".

None of the "lineages" or successions of teachers given in certain texts of the bsTan'gyur seems as a whole to have influenced the litany's choice of siddhas.

The description of the "cha lugs" already mentioned, the appearance of the siddhas in the bsTan'gyur is a short treatise extant in some editions and copies of editions. We find it in the copy formerly preserved in Berlin and now in Marburg³⁰ as well as in the better copy preserved in Copenhagen. The author is said to be dPalsde from Nepal. The treatise begins with Luyipa. In many cases both the Tibetan and the Sanskrit name of the siddha are given.³¹

A number of siddhas is common to this treatise and to our scrolls in Stockholm.³² If we compare the prescriptions in the treatise for one of those siddhas with his effigy in the scrolls we find differences. In the treatise Klugrub — number 5 — is pictured together with a woman, while 'Phagspalha-Āryadeva is meant to be depicted as a monk. In the scrolls they both appear as dignified single personages. Luyipa is described in the treatise as follows: lu yi pa du ba'i mdog čan skyes pa daṅ lhan gčig pa'o.³³ This is what we find in our scroll, though much elaborated and with many details. Telopa is described: nag po bud med daṅ lhan gčig pa.³⁴ Our Telopa is not black, he has attendants and an oil-press. For Marmemjad the treatise instructs: mar me mjad dkar śam gžo . . . bud med daṅ lhan gčig pa.³⁵ But in our scroll Marmemjad is sitting alone holding a fly-whisk. — These are a few examples out of many.

The Musée Guimet in Paris owns a set of scrolls (not quite complete) with the Eighty Four Siddhas. If we compare siddhas common to this set and to our scrolls we have the same experience as with the treatise. They do not correspond. Nor is this the case with siddhas common to our ³¹ Cf. Excursus II. The Sanskrit name usually appears as a gloss in the next line in smaller print.

³² It may be noted that our scrolls and the litany contain Asaṅga but not his brother Vasubandhu. The treatise, on the contrary, has two Vasubandhu and no Asaṅga. Asaṅga's original name is said to have been Vasubandhu.

scrolls and to the scrolls reproduced by Grünwedel nor with the siddhas found by Albert Grünwedel with nimbus and Ugurian inscriptions.

We have already mentioned one scroll in American possession showing three siddhas belonging to the series of the litany and our scrolls; though the identity of the siddhas is unmistakable, the painter evidently belongs to another school. The "king" is much more elaborately depicted, the ferryman rows a different kind of boat, and the whole way of expressing the muscular play of the human body is different.

Taken as a whole our scrolls show a great variety of holy persons. None has nimbus or gloria.³⁶ There is a marked difference between the faces of intellectual men, kings and traders. A large group is formed of tantrics with bone-ornaments and with scanty dress or completely naked. They remind us strongly of the description of Śiva by the Tamil poets:

His ears are beringed,
He rideth the bull;
His head is adorned with the crescent moon's ray;
White is He with ash from the burning-ground swept —
His form is smeared with ashes white, or:

The snake His strange adornment is —³⁷

They are interspersed with ordinary-looking men, some of them — Nāgabodhi and Phagchañpa for instance — not too unlike our western saints.³⁸ The learned men often show little or nothing of tantric appearance. Saṅsrgyasyeśes carries a skull-cup. Dharmakīrti's picture might almost follow the tradition of some convent, where pictures of the sages are said to have adorned the walls.³⁹ The men are mostly bearded. The hair is flowing or bound up in knots. The dress of the siddhas varies. Sometimes the man and the attendant wear little or nothing except the tantric ornaments. Some are clothed in animal skins. Some are dressed in trousers and upper garments. The kings have crowns of varying shape. In fact the pictures in our scrolls look as if they have been gathered from various collections.

Each siddha, alone or with a companion or attendants, forms an independent group. Whenever space allows there are groups of animals after the Chinese fashion: elephants and snakes in scroll I, V, and XII, monkeys in II and VII, gazelles in IV, pigs in V, mountain-sheep in XII, geese and various other birds in XII, dogs and jackals in III and XI, marmots in IX and XI, birds, snakes and lizards. In shape and colour the dog is rather like a Chinese red chowchow. The marmots are apparently some large variety. The most surprising specimen of the fauna are the elephants. Two of them are very small and depicted together with Nāgabodhi. The third which carries the siddha Kalalañka-Kalaka is also somewhat undersized.

The two elephants painted as Nāgabodhi's companions are clearly a substitute for Nāgabodhi-

³⁶ So have the siddhas in the cave discovered by Grünwedel.

Gorakṣa's usual cows. How can this error have come about? The "litany" calls him "ba glaṅ" skyoṅ. As Jäschke points out "ba glaṅ" is used both for "ox" and "elephant". Such a misunderstanding may have given rise to this substitution. This might have happened in a country, where elephants could be imagined to be "the cattle" of India, the home-land of the mahāsiddhas. And we may call to mind that the two bodhisattvas painted above Vajradhara in the first thaṅka both have hutuktus in Mongolia.

The rich display of both animals and plants reflects a Chinese conception of Buddhist art.

The flora is represented by trees and shrubs and flowers, a considerable part of which grow in or near the water.

The painter's tradition follows faithfully the intentions of the litany. It is the iconographical tradition that has made the first scroll an impressive piece of high-church piety. It is a sort of glorification not only of Vajradhara and his pair of bodhisattvas, but of Klusgrub (sñiṅpo) — here given the philosopher's name — and Āryadeva. The tantric Klusgrub, teacher of the tantric Candrakīrti at the end of the 9th century, and the tantric Āryadeva are, according to their stories,⁴⁰ both connected with the great convent Nālanda (now Bargaon in the district of Patna), once of high reputation throughout the orient.⁴¹

The Eighty Four Siddhas are still objects of worship and admiration. rDorjegdānpa's prayer at the end of the litany may well represent the attitude in which they are approached:⁴²

Or, in free translation:

With devotion I bow down to
 All the scholars gone to heaven
 Who supported mystic truths
 And to all who won perfection.
 Bowing let the prayer be uttered
 While the heart feels loving pity
 Many secret charms and actions
 To the Eighty Four, the Siddhas,
 Most respectfully performing Loving kindness in the heart.
 May the pious body-actions
 Add to greatness of the body,
 May the tongue-produced blessings
 Bless the speech to greater power,
 Wisdom in the mind increased
 In the mind a light may kindle.
 Works, words, thoughts may utter blessings,
 Prayer-flow be never cut,
 Body-of-Doctrine be steadied,
 Iron-hook of pity fastened.
 Having said my prayers to You:
 Guaranteed through joy arising
 Be the welfare of the beings' six kinds.
 May the heart grasp Mahāmudrā's sense.

DESCRIPTION

- In the centre : Vajradhara : single, one face, two arms body : dark blue, nimbus : light green, outer nimbus : dark green gloria : orange, with golden rays golden ornaments, with jewels attitude : vajraparyamka, mudrā : vajrahumkāra holds a golden vajra in his right hand, and a golden bell in his left Above him : a garuḍa with a nāga in its beak, and with flame-coloured hair
Before him : table with sacred objects, in the centre : wheel
- Upper left corner : Maitreya, one face, two arms body : yellow, golden ornaments
attitude : paryamka
right hand holds lotus surmounted by a bumpa left hand : varada mudrā
nimbus : dark green, gloria : dark blue with golden rays
- Upper right corner : Mañjuśrī, single body : yellow, golden ornaments
attitude : paryamka
right hand on right knee, fingers lifted left hand holding lotus surmounted by book and sword nimbus : green (like Maitreya's) gloria : dark blue, with golden rays
- Left corner at bottom : Klugrub, single, no beard body : white, before him : wheel, mudrā : dharmacakra snakes : 1 whitish, 2 red, 2 green, 2 blue dress : orange with gold trimmings, leaves, dark red edged with gold
- Rising from the waves : the nāga-king face : white, body : green-scaled snakes : 1 whitish, 1 green, 1 red, 1 blue
- Right corner at the bottom : Āryadeva, single, bearded body : white, hands folded, before him : bowl dress : orange, head-dress : dark red, both with golden trimmings

RDO RJE 'CHAHŃ

has the inscription:

rgyal ba rdo rje 'chahŃ la na mo

Glory to Jina rDorje'chahŃ

And the litany says:

/ bla ma dpal ldan rdo rje 'chahŃ /
/ bla ma rnams la phyag 'chal lo /
I bow down to the noble lama Rdorje'chahŃ
And to the lamas

Maitreya and Mañjuśrī have no inscriptions. Maitreya is, of course, the coming buddha, and Mañjuśrī was thought to be incarnated in the emperors of China as well as in bcoŃkhapa.

KLU GRUB = KLU SGRUB SŃIŃ PO

The inscription describes him as a "Reverend One" ('phags pa, ārya):

'phags pa klu grub la na mo

Glory to Ārya Klugrub

In the litany he appears as a priest (dgesloŃ) who was given the elixir by the goddess of the wood:

/ dge sloŃ lus la dŃos grub brŃes /
/ nags kyi lha mos bdud rcŃ phul /
/ klu sgrub sŃiŃ po Ńes bya ba'i /
/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
I bow down to the lama
Called KlusgrubsŃiŃpo
To whom the wood-goddess brought nectar
Who obtained perfection as a monk

The "'phags pa klu grub" as a combination of the name with a title is the same as we find in the "Pantheon of the 300", where the prayer to the great Nāgārjuna runs:

/ dpal mgon 'phags pa klu grub la /
/ gsol ba 'debs so byin gyis brlobs /
To the Noble Protector, the Reverend Klugrub
I bow down, and devoutly pray

The mudrā is different. Similarly the name is different as the litany's reading "Klusgrub-sŃiŃpo-Nāgārjunagarbha" must be considered the better reading. Nor does the bowl of nectar in the scaly hands of the nāga-king in our scroll tally with the great Nāgārjuna's story. According to this story he gets books (the Prajñāpāramitā) from the nāgas, not a bowl of elixir. The elixir is tantric equipment, being one of the eight "powers" (siddhis). Of the elixir we read in the legend of the tantric Nāgārjuna and of the tantric Nāgabodhi his pupil and successor. By Tucci and others this tantric Nāgārjuna is distinguished from the great philosopher Nāgārjuna who is often called the founder of the Mahāyāna, and whose work Mādhyamika-vṛtti was commented on by Candrakīrti; he is stated to have lived about 645.¹ The third Pančhenlama in his enumeration of siddhas and holy teachers includes "dpal mgon 'phags pa klu sgrub" — the title is the same as the great Nāgārjuna's in the Pantheon.²

In Grünwedel's "Geschichten" the mahāsiddhas Nāgārjuna and Nāgabodhi are treated of in story 16 and story 76 respectively. Both siddhas belonged to the priestly caste and were brahmins. Nāgabodhi seems also to have been called Klusgrubsñiṅpo. This Nāgabodhi is not to be found elsewhere either in the litany or in our scrolls; the Nāgabodhi numbered 29 in the litany is identical with the (or a) Gorakṣa, possibly the Gorakṣa of the stories.³

The Klugrub in the scrolls may be identical with the mahāsiddha numbered 5 in the Description of the Eighty Four Mahāsiddhas found in the Tangyur.⁴ A Klugrub is also among the saints in the lhakhañ described by Francke,⁵ while a Nāgārjuna is mentioned in the Bauddha-gān O Dohā as number 33. Our strophe in the litany corresponds most closely with the Nāgabodhi of the 76th story. This siddha may, in the course of time, have been mixed up with the tantric Nāgārjuna. Such fusions of saints are not unknown to our western legends.⁶

The picture in our scrolls and the inscription beneath it are clearly intended to suggest similarity to the great philosopher Nāgārjuna, whom Grünwedel has called the "Faust des Buddhismus". It may be recalled that the tantric Nāgārjuna and his disciple Nāgabodhi were connected with the convent Pūvarṇa and with the solitudes of Śrī Parvata. Here the great Nāgārjuna is said to have died. In Nepal one is still shown a cave of Nāgārjuna, also the place where he got the book from the Nāgas.

³ Grünwedel, Šambhala, 48.

⁴ Excursus II.

⁵ l.c.

⁶ So has the beheaded bishop Dionysius been mixed up with Dionysius Areopagita.

A RYA DE VA = Ā RYA DE BA

Our inscription gives only the name and even a title is lacking:

a rya de va la na mo

Glory to Aryadeva

From the litany we learn he was "lotus born" and respectful towards the lama:

/ bla ma la gus dños grub brñes /
 / pad ma las 'khruñs lus mčhog 'jin /
 / â rya de ba žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Āryadeba
 Who got a precious body, born in a lotus
 Who got perfection, respectful towards the lama

Again, as in the case of the first siddha, we have a man called by the name of a renowned philosopher. Again, he is not identical with him, but a tantric of later times. Being lotus-born, however, as expressly stated in the litany, he equals the great Āryadeva.¹ He is very probably identical with the hero Āryadeva of Grünwedel's story number 18. In the beginning of this story the very denial of a miraculous birth is a pointer to some such legend. From the extant songs of the tantric Āryadeva Bhattacharyya concludes that he was resident in Bengal.

Similarly this tantric has got the appearance of a saintly scholar. One may recall the prayer to the great Āryadeva in the Pantheon of the 300:

/ grub brñes a rya de ba la /
 / gsol ba 'debs so byin gyis brlobs /
 The perfect Āryadeba
 I invoke, and devoutly pray²

Āryadeva is one of Padmasambhava's names. I do not think this relevant here.

 dark tree with blue and yellowish leafage
 Beneath Padmabajra : couple of monkeys with young monkeys : blackish-brown young : greyish-brown

LU YI PA = LÜ YI PA

He is the first of our series in the scrolls whom the inscription calls siddha, "grub thob":

grub thob lu yi pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Luyipa

The litany tells of his caste and of his most popular performance:

/ yig mkhan rigs la skal bar ldan /
 / ña lto za žiñ dños grub brñes /
 / lü yi pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Lūyipa
 Who obtained perfection eating entrails of fish
 A blessed one in the caste of scribes

Tāranātha says that Luyipa was the scribe of king Samantaśubha, a king of Uḍḍiyāna in the West.¹ Hence he would have lived in the 7th century, and Sylvain Lévi and Shahidullah date him accordingly.² They think he was an older contemporary of Dipaṅkara-Atiśa³ and Bhattacharyya dates him to about 669.⁴ In the Tangyur five works are attributed to him, one of which is said to have been revealed to him by Atiśa.⁵ This Luyipa often heads a series of the Eighty Four Siddhas. The "story" tells us he was the son of a king in Magadha. A sky-walker helped him to free his mind from all ideas as to caste-pride and clean food. He came to live on entrails of fish, and this practice seems to have become his most popular performance. It is emphasized in the Pantheon of the 300, where he forms a triad together with "The Arrowsmith" and "The Hunter":

/ grub pa'i dbaṅ phyug ña lto bar /
 / gsol ba 'debs so byin gyis brlob /
 The mighty Perfect-One, the eater of entrails of fish
 I invoke, and devoutly pray

In the Description of the 84 siddhas this trait is not mentioned.⁶

⁶ Cf. Excursus III (number 1).

PADMA BAJRA = PADMA BAJRA

Like Luipa — the siddha just dealt with — Padmabajra is called “siddha” in the inscription:

grub thob padma bajra la na mo

Glory to the siddha Padmabajra

From the litany we learn that he ate tree-fruits and was a householder:

/ khyim pa'i lus la thar bu'i rigs /
 / śiñ tog za žiñ lam mčhog brñes /
 / padma bajra žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Padmabajra
 Who obtained the precious road eating tree-fruits
 A householder of tharbu-caste

This man is not among the heroes of Grünwedel's stories, and his picture is not found in the edited Pantheons. As Tucci points out, our siddha number four is probably identical with the “great” Padmavajra who was the teacher of Anaṅgavajra (number 25 in our series) and whose story is told by Tāranātha.¹ He was a brahmin by birth, says this author, and was born in Maru in the West. He won the elixir of life and beheld Vajrasattva. Bhattacharyya has rediscovered Padmavajra's work Guhyasiddhi.² Works of Padmavajra are found in the Tangyur.³ According to Buddhagupta our Padmavajra founded a temple of Hevajra in Maru.⁴ In the Blue Annals Padmavajra the composer of the Guhyasiddhi is said to have been a farmer.⁵ It is certainly this Padmavajra who occupies number 16 in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁶ There is a Padmavajra among the reincarnated ancestors of the Dalailama (number 50) immediately before the first Dalailama. He cannot have anything to do with our siddha.⁷

SA RA HA = SA RA HA

Like the two siddhas just dealt with Saraha is also called a "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob sa ra ha la na mo

Glory to the siddha Saraha

The litany mentions his caste and his profession:

/ bram ze'i rigs gar mkhan lus /
 / dpal gyi ri la dños grub brñes /
 / sa ra ha žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Saraha
 Who won perfection on the Noble Mountain
 A dancer in the brahmin-caste

This siddha is also called Rāhulabhadra. An account of his career is found in story number 6 in Grünwedel's "Geschichten". He won salvation with the help of an arrow-maker's daughter. Bhattacharyya dates him to about 633.¹ In the Sāadhanamālā he is said to have composed the sādhana for Trailokyavaśaṅkara.² Songs attributed to him are edited by Shahidullah.³ He is included in the Pantheons, and the Pantheon of the 300 contains the prayer:

/ dpal ldan sa ra ha pa la /
 / gsol ba 'debs so byin gyis brlobs /

He ought to be identical with number 9 in rJesgnañbyachul who, however, is ordered to be painted without the arrow.⁴ The third Panchenlama mentions the "great brahmin the Noble Saraha".⁵ One of his superhuman helpers is Acala.⁶ The dPalgyiri emphasized in the litany was hallowed as the place where the great Nāgārjuna had left our world.⁷

MCHO SKYES RDO RJE = MCHO SKYES RDO RJE

Again as in the preceding cases our holy man is called a siddha in the inscription:

grub thob mcho skyes rdo rje la na mo

Glory to the siddha mChoskyesrdorje

The litany says he was of the "moon" (or: lotus)-caste:

/ zla ba'i rigs la dños grub brñes /

/ padma ni dañ ldan čig bžugs /

/ mcho skyes rdo rje žes bya ba'i /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called mChoskyesrdorje

Who won a padmini (?)

Who obtained perfection in the moon-caste

Apparently we find this mahāsiddha in the third Pančhenlama's Śam bha la'i lam yig. The siddha, it is stated, had in the country Maru won the king's daughter who was a padmini: ... slob dpon mcho skyes kyis rigs ñan gyi rgyal po'i bu mo pad ma čan rju 'phrul gyis bkug nas las la bkol te bžeñs pa...¹ A mChoskyesrdorje is not found in Grünwedels "Geschichten" but probably our siddha occupies number 7 in the Description of the 84 siddhas,² and also is identical with Sumpamkhanpo's mChoskyes,³ and with the Saroruhavajra mentioned in the Tangyur and elsewhere.⁴ Also the first Dalailama mentions him.⁵ — Our siddha's master is said to have been Kukuripa. — The bottom of the lotus-flower is called "moon".

ḌOM BI HE RU KA = ḌOM BI HE RU KA

On this occasion the inscription contains only the name, and a title is lacking:

ḍom bi he ru ka la na mo

Glory to Ḍombiheruka

The litany, however, at this point provides us with some significant details:

/ gdiñ ba btiñ nas gañgā brgal /
 / stag la žon nas dños grub brñes /
 / ḍorñ bi he ru ka žes bya'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Ḍombiheruka
 Who got perfection mounted on a tiger
 Who crossed the Ganges, having spread the carpet

The founder of the Yellow Church bCoñkhapa, we are told, once showed himself to his disciples in the shape of this siddha.

The story of this personage we find in number 4 of Grünwedel's "Geschichten". He was, we are told, a king of Magadha, who became a disciple of Virūpa and got the siddhis from Hevajra.¹ He appears in the Sādhana-mālā as a follower of the Hevajratāntra.² He is spoken of by Tāranātha as a contemporary of rDorjedrilbu.³ Bhattacharyya dates him about 777.⁴ As "ḍorñ bi pa" the same siddha is doubtless described in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁵ Very probably we find the same man as "mahāsiddha Ḍombipa" in "Die Legenden des Nā-ro-pa", transl. by A. Grünwedel. 1933, 153. The Pantheon of the 300 has a Ḍombipa who is, I think, also identical with our siddha. The prayer to him runs:

/ che gčig mčhog brñes ḍombi par /
 / gsol ba 'debs so byin gyis brlobs /
 Ḍombipa who got the Jewel in one life-time
 I invoke, and devoutly pray

Ḍombiheruka is mentioned as an author in the Tangyur.⁶

BIR VA PA = BI RŪ PA

From the inscription, as in the case of Ḍoribiheruka, we learn only the name:

bir va pa la na mo

Glory to Birvapa

The litany has preserved the original form of the name Birvapa: Birūpa (Virūpa): We are also given some details as to wonderful feats performed by him. He is said to have crossed a river in an extraordinary way — in our scroll he seems to point at that river — and to have pawned the sun for ale:

/ čhu bo čhen po gyen la bzlog /

/ čhañ la ñi ma gte bar bčud⁶ /

/ bi rŭ pa žes bya ba yi /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called Birūpa

Who gave the sun as a pawn for ale

Who crossed the great river

The "great river" is the river Ganges, as we are told in his story, number 3 of the "Geschichten". He was a native of Magadha in king Dharmapāla's time. On a certain occasion he came to the river Ganges and asked the goddess Gaṅgā for food and drink but she refused to give him anything. He crossed the river and reached a tavern, and there, having nothing else, he pledged the sun for ale and commanded it to stand still. Finally the king had to pay a ransom in order to free the sun. Other miraculous incidents are recounted in this story, as, for instance, the resuscitation of animals that had been eaten.

Bhattacharyya dates Virūpa to about 777.¹ A statue of Virūpa was visited by Buddhagupta and Tucci has seen his effigy.² The Lhasa Cathedral too contains an effigy. Tāranātha knows of three Virūpas.³ In the 'Tangyur various works are attributed to a Virūpa or Virūya.⁴ However, it is hardly possible to make a clear distinction between the several authors of this name. A small thaṅka probably shows this siddha only, pointing at the sun.⁵

BHU SU KU = BHU SU KU PA

Like the two last inscriptions this also contains only the name of the siddha:

bhu su ku la na mo

Glory to Bhusuku

The litany is more explicit. Bhusuku, we read, saw the thugsdam in Nālanda, composed books, and departed skywards:

/ na lendra ru thugs dam gzigs /
 / bstan bcos rcom žiñ mkha' la gśegs /
 / bhu su ku pa žes bya ba* /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Bhusukupā
 Who went skywards, composed scientific books,
 Who saw the thugsdam in Nālanda

Among Grünwedel's "Geschichten" there is a story (number 41) of the siddha Bhusuku. He was of warrior caste and became a monk in Nālanda. "Bhusuku" was his nickname, given because he was always sleepy and hungry. He was cured of these shortcomings by Mañjuśrī in person. (Mañjuśrī must be considered as his thugsdam). When his high qualities were revealed he obtained the name Śāntideva.

This monk and our Bhusuku(pa) have quite enough traits in common for us to conclude that they are one and the same person. The difficulty is that our scrolls also present us with a Śāntipa (number 21) who has traits in common with the Śāntideva of the story. There are supposed to be several Śāntideva, all of rather uncertain date and country.

Our Bhusuku is certainly identical with the mahāsiddha number 8 — bu su ku = za ñal 'chag — in the Description of the 84 siddhas.¹

Bhusuku(pa) occurs in the Tangyur.² Buston, who says that "Bhusuku" was a nickname of Śāntideva, mentions three works.³ A Śāntideva is mentioned in the Tangyur as the author of the "lhan čig skyes pa'i glū"⁴ and other compositions.⁵

THANKA III

DRIL BU PA = RDO RJE DRIL BU

As in several cases already treated the inscription gives the name only:

dril bu pa la na mo

Glory to Drilbuṣa

The litany tells us he reached perfection in Ghaṅgrala-Bhaṅghala, and together with his family:

/ bu smad bčas śiñ dños grub brñes /

/ ghaṅ gra la ru dños grub brñes¹ /

/ rdo rje dril bu žes bya ba'i /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called rDorjedrilbu

Who obtained perfection in Ghaṅgrala

Who reached perfection together with his family

The manner in which he became perfect "together with his family" is related in number 52 of Grünwedel's "Geschichten". He is tempted by the beautiful young daughter of a harlot and she becomes his mate. Together they win liberation. Before the eyes of the terrified king Devapāla the siddha and his mate change into the sacred pair of Cakrasamvara and Vajravārāhi.

We meet this siddha as an author in the Tangyur.² Tāranātha tells us that he was a contemporary of Ḍombiheruka and Sukhadeva.³ Bhattacharyya dates him about 681.³ In the Cakrasamvaramaṇḍala he is said to have initiated Lvavapa.⁴

Our scroll shows him as an exstatic tantric while the Pantheon of the 300 represents him as an ascetic with beard and bell. The Description of the 84 siddhas depicts him as saffron-coloured.⁵

NA LE NDRA PA = NA LE NDRA PA

The inscription contains the title "siddha" besides the name:

grub thob na le ndra pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Nalendrapa

The scroll shows this siddha flying and holding home twisted object in his hands. The litany shows him departing skywards carrying a sword when he had obtained perfection:

/ dka' thub mjad čin dños grub brñes /

/ ral gri khyer nas mkha' la gśegs /

/ na le ndra pa žes bya ba'i /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called Nalendrapa

Who went skywards carrying the sword

Who got perfection, doing penance

The name "Nalendrapa" I have not met among the siddhas.¹ But it means no more than "man from Nalendra" (where a famous monastery was situated) and the siddha might be known and recorded under another name. Our siddha who "carries the sword" might be identical with the siddha Khadga who is the hero of number 15 of Grünwedels "Geschichten". Khadga is also called "ral gri pa". He was, the story tells us, a house holder who became a robber and a thief. He was converted by the yogi Carpati. With the help of this yogi, and that of the bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara himself, he obtained the sword-siddhi. It is recorded of him that a black serpent in his hands changed into a sword. — The twisted object that our siddha holds in his hands in the scroll might well be that serpent-sword. The Description of the 84 siddhas enumerates as number 49 a "ral gri grub pa — khadga siddha".²

KU KU RI PA = KU KU RI PA

He is described as a siddha in the inscription:

grub thob ku ku ri pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kukuripa

In the litany we are informed that he was of low caste and a bhikṣu:

/ dge sloṅ lus la gdol pa'i rigs /
 / phyag rgya ma dañ dños grub brñes /
 / ku ku ri pa žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kukuripa
 Who won the mudrā and perfection
 Of low caste, a bhikṣu

In his edition of the "Geschichten" Grünwedel reproduces a picture of a Kukuripa with the inscription:

gdol rigs yum bcas ku ku ri pa'i žabs
 Kukuripa of low caste with the śakti

Here we evidently have the same man.¹ Not a man of low caste but a brahmin Kukuripa is the hero of number 34 of the "Geschichten". He became a beggar and took pity on a bitch. He did not forget her even when in the realm of the 33 gods and came back to her. She turned out to be a skywalker and helped him towards perfection. The brahmin Kukuripa, according to Sumpamkhanpo, brought the Herukasādhana from the skywalkers.² The same author knows also of a Kukurācārya who was a tantric and who loved dogs.³ The "khyimočan" in the Description of the 84 siddhas is probably the same as the man on our scroll.⁴

SAÑS RGYAS YE ŚES = SAÑS RGYAS YE ŚES

He is the first in our series who is called a "panchen", a very learned man:

pan chen sañs rgyas ye śes la na mo

Glory to the mahāpañḍita Sañsrgyasyeśes

This man, the litany tells us, was a bhikṣu who beheld the deity Guhyasamāja:

/ dge sloñ lus la ye śes spyan /
 / śiñ kun gnas su gsañ 'dus gzigs /
 / sañs rgyas ye śes žes bya ba'i /

 Called Sañsrgyasyeśes
 Who saw Guhyasamāja in Śiñkun
 A wisdom-eye in a monk's profession

Śiñkun, as we are told by Jäschke, is a mountain-pass between Lahoul and Zankar.¹

We do not find this monk among the "Geschichten", but he is otherwise well-known. He appears in the legend of Padmasambhava.² He wrote, says Buston, fourteen works on the Scripture of Guhyasamāja, was a pupil of Haribhadra and received consecration from the bodhisattva Mañjuśrī.³ According to Tāranātha he lived in the time of king Gopāla, worked in Vikramaśīla, and became the king's priest.⁴

NAG PO RDO RJE = NAG PO RDO RJE

The inscription in our scroll confers upon him the title of "siddha":

Glory to the siddha Nagpordorje

From the litany we learn his peculiar manner of reaching perfection:

/ dka' thub dor nas spyod pa mjad /

 I bow down to the lama
 Called Nagpordorje
 Who won perfection by various means²
 Who did the deed declining hardship

This siddha is hardly Kṛṣṇacari or Kāṇha whose poetical work has been published by Shahidullah who calls him (as well as Saraha) a nihilist.³ The published song certainly teaches the rejection of hardship in striving for perfection and bears out the "dka' thub dor" of the litany. Our siddha is possibly mentioned as Kṛṣṇavajra as one of the authors in the Tangyur.⁴ On the scroll the siddha is breathing fire.

I NDRA BHO DHI = I NDRA BHŪ TI

He is presented in the inscription neither as a siddha nor as a man of learning, but as a king:

rgyal po i ndra bho dhi la na ma

Glory to king Indrabhodhi

The litany places him in Orgyan and shows him as obtaining perfection together with his sister:

/ rgyal rigs o rgyan gnas na bžugs⁷ /

/ lcam dañ lhan čig dños grub brñes /

/ i ndra bhū ti žes bya ba'i /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called Indrabhūti

Who won perfection together with his sister

Who dwelled in Orgyan, of warrior-caste

The lady beside the king in our scroll might well be this sister, as the paintings in our scrolls usually follow the pattern advised by the litany. Grünwedel's "Geschichten" have separate stories of the king (42) and of his sister Lakṣmīkarā (82) who, as is the case of all female siddhas, is lacking in our series. It was she who by her example urged him to strive for perfection. The women of the court were taught by the guru Kambala-Lvavapa.¹

Bhattacharyya calls this king the founder of the Vajrayāna and dates him to about 700.² He is located in Orissa and the ruins of his palace were visited by Tāranātha's teacher Buddhagupta.³ In the Tangyur a Kurukullā-sādhana is attributed to this king.⁴ As number 23 he is enumerated in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁵ He is depicted in a picture-manuscript in Cambridge, and probably in the Alchi monastery.⁶

NĀ RO PA = NĀ RO PA

The inscription gives only the name without any title:

na ro pa la na mo

Glory to Naroṇa

In the litany we are given information as to his caste and his wonderful capacities:

/ bram ze rañ gi bu mo bsten /
 / rdo rje bsnun cñ sa 'og bgrod /
 / nā ro pa zes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Nāroṇa
 Who walked underground having stuck down the vajra
 A brahmin, keeping to his own woman

This man is considered a pupil of Tilopa-Telopa and a contemporary of Maitripa. He is one of the "ancestors" of the bKa'brgyudpa-order.¹ Legends about him have been published by Grünwedel.² In the Pantheon of the 300 he is called the "sow-winner" — the "sow" being the mighty yidam Vajravārāhī:

/ phag mo'i rjes bzuñ nā ro par /
 / gsol ba 'debs so byin gyis brlobs /

Bhattacharyya dates him to about 990.³ He appears as an author in the Tangyur.⁴ He is depicted in the Alchi monastery⁵ and Tucci has found his statue among those of other bKa'brgyudpa-saints.⁶ He occupies number 72 in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁷ The third Panchenlama tells of his stay in Phullahari.⁸

RTOG RCE PA = TOG RCE PA

The inscription calls him "siddha":

grub thob rtoḡ rce pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha rTogrcepa

He is of the tharu-caste, says the litany, and a carpenter:

/ tha ru'i rigs la śiñ mkhan lus /
 / phyag rgya ma dañ dños grub brñes /
 / toḡ rce pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Togrcepa
 Who won mudrā and perfection
 A carpenter in the tharu-caste

The tharu-caste or tharu-tribe lives in the Tarai in Nepal. They are said to be akin to the Newar and not to be susceptible to swamp-fever. "mtha ru" would mean "in the border-land".

"Togrcepa" means "the man with the axe". Our siddha is probably identical with Koṭali whose story is number 44 of the "Geschichten". The man in this story tills the earth and gets converted by the ācārya Śantipa. They met, the story says, at a place four days' journey from Rāmeśvara. An author rTogrcepa'i žabs (Togce) is found in the Tangyur.¹ As number 22 "toḡ rce pa" is enumerated in the Description of the 84 siddhas.² Our rTogrcepa is seen carrying a stout stick, not an axe.

² Excursus II.

TAN TRA PA = TAN TRA LA

Like number 17 this man is called "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob tan tra pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Tantrapa

He was a brahmin by birth, we are informed in the litany, and did menial work:

/ bram ze dman pa'i spyod pa mjad /
 / thabs kyis 'cho zin dños grub brñes³ /
 / tan tra la¹ zes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Tantrala
 Who won perfection living by the method
 A brahmin, doing menial work

He is certainly identical with the brahmin Tantrapa of whom Grünwedel has reproduced a picture with the subscription:

bram ze dman spyod mjad pa tan tra pa
 Tantrapa, a brahmin, doing menial work²

Grünwedel identifies him with number 33 in the "Geschichten": Tandhepa, the dice-thrower who loses his fortune in consequence of indulging in this passion and is converted by a holy man. The story says he is of low caste but the identification seems probable enough.³ He might be number 52 in the Description.⁴

¹ In Tucci's list number 3 he is called tan ka la.

² Grünwedel, Geschichten 140.

³ The Blue Annals know of a brahmin Catrara; Blue Annals 368. He was a disciple of Rakṣi-tapāda.

⁴ Excursus II.

⁵ Oslo Tangyur: thags kyis ~ (= by weaving).

LVA VA PA = LA VA PA

No title is given, the inscription containing the name only:

lva va pa la na mo

Glory to Lavapa

He was, the litany informs us, a bhikṣu who sat in a grass hut:

/ dge sloṅ spros med spyod pa mjad /
 / 'jag sbyil nañ du dños grub brñes /
 / la va pa žes bya pa yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Lavapa
 Who won perfection in the grass hut¹
 A bhikṣu conducting himself without action

This siddha is certainly identical with the bhikṣu Ṇabopa shown sitting in a grass hut in a picture reproduced by Grünwedel. The picture has the subscription:

dge sloṅ spros med 'jag spyil ña bo pa
 Ṇabopa the bhikṣu, without action, in the grass hut²

In our scroll he is looking at a rock dangling before him in mid air, and making the "fascination-mudrā". This betrays his identity with Kambala, number 30 of the "Geschichten". Here he is said to be a king and the son of a king. He renounces the world, becomes a yogi and a beggar. His mother, who is a dākinī, gives him the abhiṣeka of Samvara. He blasts a rock by merely pointing at it. He also subdued witches who had eaten his cowl and made them vomit it up.³ Works of Lavapa are found in the Tangyur.⁴ "lva ba" means: woollen blanket, Kambala. Our mahā-siddha is probably identical with number 29 in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁵

² Grünwedel, Geschichten 140. — "ña" stands for "la".

⁵ Excursus II. — He is said to have been the teacher of the siddha Jalandharapa.

CA NDRA PA = CANDRA GO MI

As in number 17 and 18 we find the title "siddha" attached to this man in our inscription:

grub thob ca ndra pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Candrapa

The litany presents him as a champion in disputation against the "mu stegs"; he is also said to have got Tārā's protection:

/ mu stegs rcod pa las rgyal žiñ /
 / rgya mcho'i gliñ la sgrol mas skyabs /
 / candra go mi žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Candragomi
 Protected by Tārā on an island in the sea
 Who won over a disputing tīrthya

This man is doubtless the same as he whose picture is reproduced by Grünwedel with the subscription:

rcod rgyal sgrol skyabs ca ndra go mi žabs
 Candragomi, protected by Tārā, victor in disputation

The Tibetan tradition does not, says De, distinguish the tantric Candragomi from the grammarian Candragomi¹ whose works Liebich and Renou have studied.² Tāranātha tells us that Candragomi was a learned man and married a king's daughter whose name was Tārā. As this was the same name as that of his divine protectress he left his wife and became an upāsaka. In Nālanda he met Candrakīrti.³ He seems to have been nicknamed "gliñ pa".⁴

KEN TO PA = ŚAN TI PA

This man, like numbers 17, 18 and 20 is given the title "siddha":

grub thob ken to pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kentopa

The invocation of the litany says that he examined rice and was a member of the warrior caste:

/ rgyal rigs dman pa'i spyod pa mjad /
 / 'bras so 'bru žiñ dños grub brñes² /
 / śan ti pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Śantipa
 Who won perfection examining rice
 Of warrior caste, doing poor work

The siddha is painted with two gazelles near him. This suggests identification with Śāntideva or Žibalha who resuscitated such animals when accused of having eaten them. Śāntideva was a monk and is said to have been nicknamed Bhusuku. In our scrolls we find a Bhusuku (n. 9) as well as this Śantipa. In Tāranātha's Čhos'byuñ he is called a great rice-eater. As already mentioned there are supposed to have been several Śāntideva, all of uncertain date and provenance. Legends of them may naturally have become profused. Probably our Bhusuku and this Śantipa are two Śāntideva. The "dman pa'i spyod pa mjad" does not speak for his identity with either Ratnākaraśānti or Śāntirakṣita.¹

¹ As Francke l.c. gives no description or number of the Śantipa in the set of siddhas found by him we can hardly decide with which of our Śantipa he corresponds. Francke identifies his saint with Śāntirakṣita. — The Śāntideva in the Pantheon of the 300 is addressed:

/ byañ čhub sems 'byoñs ži ba lha /
 / gsol ba 'debs so byin gyis brlobs /
 Žibalha perfect in charity
 I invoke and devoutly pray

A mahāpaṇḍita Śānti appears in Die Legenden des Nā-ro-pa. Übers. A. Grünwedel. 1933, 153.

² Oslo Tangyur: — 'dru ba —.

MAR ME MJAD = MAR ME MJAD

Again the inscription contains nothing beyond the name:

mar me mjad la na mo

Glory to Marmemjad

The litany says he was an unequalled master of the five sciences:

/ rig pa'i gnas lña mkhyen pas brgyan /
 / bdag gžan gñis su med par mjad /
 / mar me mjad čes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Marmemjad
 Unequalled
 Adorned with wisdom of five sciences

It seems tempting to identify this Marmemjad-Dīpaṅkara with the great Dīpaṅkaraśrījñāna-Marmemjaddpalyeśes who went as a missionary to Tibet, and who is usually painted with an object, which is thought by some to be a lamp, by others a stūpa. On a scroll kept in Oslo (number 29217), however, he lacks this object.¹ In the Pantheon of the 300 the following prayer is attached to him:

/ dpal ldan jo bo a ti śaṛ /
 / gsol ba 'debs so byin gyis brlobs /
 The noble lord Atiśa
 I invoke, and devoutly pray

Here he is invoked with his most common name: Atiśa.

De regards him as a pupil of Jetāri and the supposed author of no less than 168 works in the Tangyur.² Śāstri supposes two different Dīpaṅkara, De even more than two. Moreover, in the Tangyur we meet a translator Dīpaṅkara from India. In Tāranātha's works we read of a Marmemjadbzaṅpo who was Saṅsrgyasyeśes' successor in Vikramaśīla. The same man is said to have gone to Dramila after Padmākara.³

It is not certain, whether our Marmemjad is the great Atiśa or not. He is more surely identical with the siddha number 31 in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁴

² He is said to have been a high priest both in Vikramaśīla and in Otantapurī. — De 9.

⁴ Excursus II.

TI LLI PA = TE LO PA

Only the name is given in this inscription:

tī lli pa la na mo

Glory to Tillipā¹

Another of the many varieties of this name we find in the litany which in addition tells us that he stamped sesame and met (the) buddha in Bhaṅgala:

/ til brduñ mchog gi dños grub brñes /
 / bhañ ga la ru sañs rgyas mjal /²
 / te lo pa zes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Telopa
 Who met the buddha(s ?) in Bhaṅgala,
 Got precious perfection stamping sesam-seed

A very short story, number 22 of the "Geschichten", tells of a Tilopa who is a learned priest, a scribe, and a mendicant. He meets Nāropa. Grünwedel thinks that this siddha has been confused with another, the siddha Teli in number 62 of the "Geschichten".³ Tāranātha, however, tells both of the oil-pressing and the meeting with the buddhas.⁴

Bhattacharyya dates Tilopa about 978.⁵ The siddha's name is found among the authors of the Tangyur.⁶ He is looked upon as the first human teacher of the bKa'brgyudpa-school.⁷ He is painted in the lhakhañ of the Alchi monastery.⁸ Tucci has found him modelled together with other saints of the bKa'brgyudpa-school.⁹ Unlike our picture he is described as "black and in the company of a woman" in the Description of the 84 siddhas.¹⁰ In Nepal a cave situated above Pashupatinath is called "ti lo brag phug", Tilo-cave, and clearly attributed to our saint.

³ "Teli" = oil-merchant, now often "Jew".

NAG PO SKYON = NAG PO SPYOD PA

This man is called "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob nag po skyon

Siddha Nagposkyon

The litany certainly has the better spelling of the name. It also tells us that the development of our siddha was completed in the bardo, the intermediary stage after death:

/ bla ma'i bka' bčag spyod pa mjad /
 / srid pa bar dor rjogs sañs rgyas /
 / nag po spyod pa žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Nagpospyodpa
 A buddha completed in the bardo
 Acting, violating the lama's word

An uncommonly lengthy legend of this Kṛṣṇacārī or Kāṇha we find as number 17 in the "Geschichten". He became a monk under the guidance of Jālandhārī, but pride impeded his development. When sent to a weaver for guidance his pride again proved a stumbling-block. Harmed by a woman skilled in magic he asked help of a sky-walker who, however, was powerless to help him. He died of stomach trouble and, as the legend puts it, "went to heaven". He is mentioned in the Bauddha Gān o Dohā.¹

His songs have been published by Shahidullah.² Bhattacharyya dates him about 717.³ Tāranātha says that he introduced the Samputatilaka.⁴ The "senior or great Nagpospyodpa" is mentioned by Blo bzañ dpal ldan ye śes.⁵

PHAG CHAÑ PA = PHAG CHAÑ PA

The litany says he was a brahmin and became a lay-follower:

/ bram ze sañs rgyas dños dañ mjal /

 / phag chañ pa žes bya ba yi /

 Called Phagchañpa
 Who got perfection as a lay-follower
 Who, a brahmin, met Buddha in person

This siddha has another name: Yanlagmedpa'irdorje or Anaṅgavajra, which seems to be the more common one. He was a pupil of the great Padmavajra. According to Tāranātha he meditated twelve years and then became a swine-herd. In this occupation he reached perfection.¹ He wrote on the Hevajratāntra, and the Cakrasamvaratāntra was handed on to him by Padmavajra.² In the Description of the 84 his attitude is very different from that shown in our scroll.³

BZAÑ PO PA = BZAÑ PO PA

The title "siddha" is given him in the inscription:

grub thob bzañ po pa

Siddha bZaṅpoṇa

In the litany he searched twenty-four places and joined Bhalin:

/ ñi śu rca bži'i gnas mēhog bcal /

/ tal ba śags nas¹ bha liñ sgrogs /

/ bzañ po pa žes bya ba yi /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called bZaṅpoṇa

Who, having gone quickly, joined Bhalin²

Who searched twenty-four places

Tāranātha knows of a bZaṅpoṇa'ižabs who was a pupil of Kṛṣṇacāri and a codisciple of Chem-bupa. Both Kṛṣṇacāri and Chembupa are present in our scrolls. Sumpamkhanpo mentions this pupil of Kṛṣṇacāri as well as other men of that name.³ An ācārya Balin, say the Blue Annals, taught the method of Buddhajñāna.⁴ In the Tangyur an ācārya Baliñ is mentioned as the author of "mgon po drag gśed kyi dbañ bsdus pa'i lag len" and "chos skyoñ thams cad pa'i gtor ma'i cho ga".⁵ Cordier identifies Karmavajra's pupil Thañlopa with bZaṅpo'ižabs and Zlababzaṅpo.⁶

² "sgrogs" also = to read, to sound; sk bali = offering, balin = powerful.

ŚA VA RI PA = ŚA VA RI PA

The inscription gives him the title of siddha:

grub thob śa va ri pa

Siddha Śavaripa

The litany tells us that he dwelled on the Noble Mountain as a dancer and achieved perfection together with the one nearest to him:

/ gar mkhan dpal gyi ri la bžugs /
 / yum sriñ gñis kyis dños grub brñes¹ /
 / śa va ri pa žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Śavaripa
 Who got perfection with mother-sister
 A dancer, dwelling on the Noble Mountain

This man is certainly the hero of story number 5 of the "Geschichten". A hunter, he and his wife lived on animal flesh. He was converted by Āryāvalokiteśvara himself who preached to him and to his wife. He still lives in this Jambudvīpa, says this legend.

Bhattacharyya dates this man about 657.² He is mentioned by Sumpamkhanpo and Tāranātha³ who says he was a pupil of Nāgārjuna. He is called the "younger Saraha" — who was also a dancer. As (the younger) Saraha he occupies number 67 in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁴ With him the cult of Vajrayoginī is supposed to have originated. On the dPalgyiri the great Nāgārjuna is said to have died.⁵

⁵ Oslo Tangyur: lcam sriñ (sister and brother; lcam = wife, sister).

DHA RI KA PA = DĀ RI KA PA

This siddha dressed in royal attire is called "rgyal po" (king) in the inscription:

rgyal po dha ri ka pa

King Dharikapa

The invocation of the litany says that he belonged to the warrior-caste, also that he won the harlot and perfection:

/ rgyal rigs thañ la spyod pa mjad /
 / smad choñ ma dañ dños grub brñes /
 / dā ri ka pa zes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Dārikapa
 Who won the harlot and perfection
 Acting in exile,¹ of warrior-caste

He was a king, says story number 77 of the "Geschichten", became the siddha Luipa's disciple, and afterwards the servant of a harlot. Finally he obtained liberation. In a scroll preserved in the Musée Guimet in Paris he is shown flying.² Dārikapa = tib. smad 'choñ čan, smad 'choñ ma'i gyog.³

Dārikapa composed songs and in one of them mentioned Luipa.⁴ Bhattacharyya, however, regards him as a direct disciple not of that siddha, but of Līlāvajra. According to Śāstrī our king and siddha is a native of Bengal.⁵ He occurs in the Description of the 84 siddhas as number 62,⁶ and probably in a picture-manuscript in Cambridge.⁷

¹ "thañ" means, according to Jäschke: plain, desert; "than" is the name of a vihāra, Cordier II 50 (vol. 13, 60).

NĀGABHODHI = NĀ GA BHODHI

The inscription gives the bare name:

nāgabhodhi

Nāgabhodhi

In the invocation he is hailed as the cattle-herd who dwelt on the Noble Mountain:

/ ba glaṅ skyoṅ žiṅ dños grub brñes /
 / lus mchog dpal gyi ri la bžugs /
 / nāgabhodhi žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Nāgabhodhi
 A precious one who dwelled on the Noble Mountain
 Who got perfection herding cattle

This siddha would seem to be identical with "Gorakṣa Nāgabodhi" who appears among the siddhas reproduced by Grünwedel with the subscription:

ba glaṅ skyoṅ ba na ga bho de žabs¹

There he is shown with two cows. Accordingly his story would be number 9 of the "Geschichten". He was a cowherd in the time of king Devapāla. He helped the mutilated prince Cauraṅgi — another siddha — and was initiated by the yogi Acinta.²

Our siddha is depicted with two elephants, not two cows. This was apparently caused by mistaking the Tibetan word "ba glaṅ"; "ba glaṅ" means "ox", while "ba glaṅ" = baḷ glaṅ (wool-ox) = "glaṅ chen" (big ox) is the common word for "elephant".

Gorakṣa is still said to be worshipped as a great saint by Buddhists as well as Śaivas.³ The dPalgyiri was hallowed by the death of the great Nāgārjuna.⁴

³ G. Tucci, The Sea and Land Travels of a Buddhist Sādhu in the Sixteenth Century. The Indian Historical Quarterly 7. 1931, 683 ff. — Our Gorakṣa Nāgabodhi is different from the Nāgabodhi in number 76 of the "Geschichten"; this latter appears in the painting reproduced by Hackin, 44.

⁴ Cf. p. 102, n. 3.

MAR ME LHA = MAR ME LHA

Only the name is recorded in the inscription:

mar me lha

Marmelha

The invocation says that he wore the six ornaments in the burial ground:

/ sna chogs lus la dños grub brñes /
 / dur khrod gnas su rgyan drug gsol /
 / mar me lha žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Marmelha
 Who wore the six ornaments in the burial ground
 Who won perfection in various bodies

In the "Geschichten" we do not find a Marmelha nor have I been able to find this name elsewhere as the name of a siddha. The litany is vague. The "sna chogs lus" might remind one of the "sna chogs gzugs čan" or Lilāvajra. Possibly our siddha is the same as Marmebzañpo who is called mahāsiddha.¹ We can hardly identify him with king Agni (tib.: me lha) — datta who according to Tāranātha (Čhos'byuñ 43, 54) reigned in "byañ phyogs mtha' 'khob kyi yul nags kyi sa".

¹ Nothing else in this man's story is hinted at in the litany, cf. Tāranātha, Čhos'byuñ 215, also Cordier II 265. — A Durkhroddeva is mentioned Cordier III 152—153 (vol. 76, 54, 70). — A Marmemjadbzañpo is found Cordier II 341—342 (vol. 69, 31, 16, 17, 18, 9 ff., 12 ff.). Sumpa-mkhanpo mentions Marmemjadbzañpo (121) and Marmemjadyešes (122); the former he calls mahāsiddha (grub pa thob ste etc.). The Sanskrit-equivalent would probably be dipadeva. Instead of by dipa "lamp" might possibly be rendered by āloka. — An Alarinkadeva is mentioned as a translator in the Tangyur. — mes mī 'chig is said of Lilapa, mahāsiddha number 4 in Thob yig gsal ba'i me loñ by Blo bzañ 'phrin las, vol. II, f. 186 r—v. I am indebted to Mr. Wayman for the information.

LDIÑ GI PA = LDIÑ GI PA

The inscription confers upon him the title "siddha":

grub thob ldiñ gi pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha lDiñgi pa

According to the litany he beat rice, got perfection and departed skywards:

/ 'bras bu spyod čin dños grub brñes /
 / mña' 'chod lña brgya mkha' la gśegs /
 / ldiñ gi pa žes bya ba yi^a /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called lDiñgi pa
 Who went skywards (served by?)¹ five hundred
 Who won perfection beating rice (?)

Our siddha seems to be identical with the brahmin Diñka in Grünwedel's story number 31. This man was king Dārikapa's minister and was converted by Luipa at the same time as the king himself. He was sold to a woman who kept a tavern, and became the manager of her business. He was purified of all pride in birth, and finally departed skywards.

The name Diñka seemingly was interpreted "lDiñgi pa", and this meaning has apparently influenced the painter. "ldiñ" = to float,² and in the scroll he is shown floating in the air.³ This our painter's tradition⁴ differs from the story's and the litany's "rice-beater". In a different shape he is perhaps described in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁵

² i.i. mkha' ldiñ = Garuḍa. — Cf. sk. ḍiñ = to fly.

³ This and other forms of the name are noted by Cordier, Cordier III 116 (vol. 73,62). He is mentioned as the revisor of a text composed by Luipa.

⁴ Cf. Candra, Dhātupāṭha I 487: ḍiñ ākāśagamane.

⁵ Cf. Excursus II (number 4).

⁶ Oslo Tangyur: di ki pa.

JE TE RI = JE TA RI

He is called "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob je te ri la na mo

Glory to the siddha Jeteri

The litany shows him as victorious in defence, and as winning perfection in "Bhagala":

/ gžan gyi spyod pa las rgyal žiñ /
 / bha ga la ru dños grub brñes⁴ /
 / je ta ri žes bya ba yi⁴ /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Jetari
 Who obtained perfection in Bhagala
 Victorious against another one's action

This siddha is very probably identical with the siddha Jetari reproduced by Grünwedel, shown with sword and buckler, and the subscription:

gñan gyi rcod pa la rgyal je ta ri
 Jetari, victorious against another one's¹ action

He might not, as Grünwedel supposes, be identical with the hero of story number 15 but rather with "the younger Jetari" mentioned by Tāranātha. This man composed works in the Tangyur and was the son of Garbhapāda and a queen.² He appears in a "lineage" immediately before the three Vajrāsana-rDorjeganpa.³

² Grünwedel, Geschichten, Fig. 2. Cf. De 9.

³ See p. VII—VII a, cf. especially Cordier III 70 (vol. 71, 360).

⁴ bham ga la ru — jai ta ri — in the Oslo Tangyur.

SAR KA PA = SAR KA PA

The inscription contains the title "siddha":

grub thob sar ka pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Sarkapa

while the litany gives some details as to how he attained spiritual perfection:

/ s(m)on lam dbaṅ gis thugs dam gzigs /
 / yid čhes mčhog gi dños grub brñes /
 / sar ka pa žes bya pa yi⁴ /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Sarkapa
 Who by belief won precious perfection,
 Beheld the thugsdam by prayer-power

In our scroll he sits on a big leaf. Tucci gives his name as: sa ra ka pa (sic!). He is probably the "lotus-born-One" in number 74 of the "Geschichten", or possibly the mChoskyes in Tāranātha's Edelsteinmine.¹ If identical with the former his thugsdam would be Āryāvalokiteśvara.² This siddha is called "sa ga ra pa" in one of the scrolls reproduced by Grünwedel.³

¹ Cf. number 6 in our series Tāranātha, Edelsteinmine 45 ff.

² This son was born in the garden of king Indrabhūti and meditated for twelve years. Saṅkṛt-yāyana, l.c. has Sāgarapa.

⁴ Oslo Tangyur: sa ra ka pa žes bya ba'i.

ŚAN TI PA = ŚAN TI PA

The inscription contains his title "siddha":

grub thob śan ti pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Śantipa

The invocation says that he was of the warrior-caste, and skilled in charms:

/ rgyal rigs spyod pa mthar phyin nas /
 / 'dul 'jin gsañ śhags dños grub brñes /
 / śan ti pa zes bya pa yi* /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Śantipa
 Who grasped Vinaya, won charms, perfection,
 Came to action's end, of warrior-caste

This siddha is depicted as a dignified monk with a chaplet, not unlike the 85th and last siddha of our scrolls. He is certainly identical with the Śantipa reproduced by Grünwedel¹ who is also dressed in a monk's robe, and whose picture has the subscription:

rgyal rigs 'dul 'jin śhags mkhan śan ti pa
 Śantipa of warrior-caste, following Vinaya, mastering spells.

The Tangyur mentions a Śantipa as the author of "bde sdug gñis bral gyi lta ba zes bya ba".

There seem to be two possibilities of further identification. Story number 12 of the "Geschichten" tells of a siddha Śantipa whom Grünwedel identifies with Śantipa-Ratnākaraśānti, also called "the second Vajrāsana". According to the story he was a renowned ācārya. He did not belong to the warrior caste — he was by caste a brahmin. And he is not shown as excelling in spells and wonder-working. On the contrary. He preaches and teaches exclusively, in fact so much so that his pupil Koṭali has to show him the way to real perfection. Tāranātha too says Ratnākaraśānti belongs to the brahmin-caste. At the same time he says that some think he was of warrior-caste. Being a devotee of Vajratārā he wrote a sādhana on her mantra: Om Tāra tuttāre ture svāhā. Buddhagupta holds him in great esteem, and Bhattacharyya dates him about 978—1030.²

The second possibility is Śāntirakṣita. Francke found in the Alchi monastery's lhakhañ the picture of a Śantipa. He identifies him with Śāntirakṣita. This saint belonged to the royal family of Zahor. He composed the Tattvasaṃgraha commented on by Kamalaśīla. He died 762. He was the first abbot of Tibet's oldest monastery. This identification is perhaps more likely.³

² This would not tally with the chronology of the three Vajrāsana given above.

According to one of the “specula” attributed to Padmasambhava (Der Roman einer tibetischen Königin ed. B. Laufer) he sang the song “of the white rosary of meditation”.

⁴ Oslo Tangyur: śānti pa.

THA GA PA = THA GA PA

The title "siddha" is conferred upon him in the inscription:

grub thob tha ga pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Thagapa

According to the invocation he was of low-caste, a weaver, who won perfection:

/ gdol pa'i lus la thags mkhan las³ /
 / phyag rgya ma dañ dños grub brñes /
 / tha ga pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Thagapa
 Who won mudrā and perfection,
 A weaver, an outcast

There is no difficulty about his identity. He is the hero of number thirteen of the "Geschichten". This is a touching story about an old and very pious father and many ungrateful sons. His wife died. He was put into a small grass-hut in the garden not to disturb the family. Finally the old weaver gets initiated into the Hevajramanḍala by the guru Jalandhari who had come as a guest.

We find "the weaver" as an author in the Tangyur.¹ We probably find the man as number sixtysix (hardly as fifteen which seems to be a misspelling) in the Description of the Eighty-four Siddhas.² According to the Cakrasamvaratantra he was a pupil of Kacchapā.

³ "las" probably : lus. Oslo Tangyur: gdol pa'i rigs la thags mkhan lus.

JA LANDHA RA PA = JA LANDHARA

In the inscription the title "siddha" is bestowed on him:

grub thob ja landha ra pa la na mo

Glory of the siddha Jalandharapa

The invocation says that he was blessed by Vajravārāhi, and a scholar:

/ rdo rje phag mos byin gyis brlabs /
 / rgyud sde bži yi dgoṅs pa mkhas /
 / ja landha ra žes bya ba'i³ /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Jalandhara
 A scholar pondering the four classes of tantras
 Blessed by Vajravārāhi

He is surely the man in a picture reproduced by Grünwedel with the subscription:

phag mos byin brlabs ja lan dha ra žabs¹

In our scroll this deity is absent, though the upturned face of the siddha suggests that he is gazing at some object. In story number 46 of the "Geschichten" we probably hear more of this man. He was a brahmin who was initiated into the Hevajramanḍala by a sky-walker. He finally obtained the Mahāmudrāsiddhi.

We know of an author with the same name in the Tangyur.²

Probably there were more than one man called Jalandhari. Tāranātha speaks of a low-caste Jālandhari.³ Our siddha is probably number 18 in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁴

Sumpa mKhanpo gives p. 125 the following details: kan ka ra'i rgyal rigs kam bha la pa'am lva ba pa dañ / lva ba pa'i bu slob ja land dha ra pa.

⁵ Oslo Tangyur: jā landha ra.

KA MA LA = KA MA LA

The inscription calls him "siddha":

grub thob ka ma la la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kamala

The litany specially points out his proficiency in grammar:

/ sgra chad luñ rigs bstan bčos mkhas /
 / rigs 'jin¹ che yi dños grub brñes /
 / ka ma la žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kamala
 Who got a life-time's perfection grasping logic
 Well versed in the letter and spirit of grammar and logic

This learned man we certainly find in a picture reproduced by Grünwedel, with the subscription:

sgra chad luñ rig la mkhas ka ma la²
 Kamala, well versed in the letter and spirit of grammar and logic

Grünwedel identifies this man with the "book-fool" Catrapa, the hero of number 23 of the "Geschichten". The facts in the litany do not harmonize well with this story. One cannot help thinking of the Indian monk Kamalaśīla — a pupil of Śāntirakṣita and mentioned in the Tangyur — who worked in Tibet together with Padmasambhava. The Lhasa Cathedral contains effigies of him. I think our siddha is identical with him.³ The same man is probably painted in the lhakhañ of the Alchi monastery,⁴ and was seen by Tucci.⁵

¹ The Tangyur preserved in Marburg has "rig 'jin".

 In whose mind rose the meditation on the Baskets
 (of) the Upāya and Prajñāpāramitā

This is certainly the same man reproduced by Grünwedel with the subscription:

thabs śes sde snod dgoñs śar gser gliñ pa¹
 gSergliñpa (to whom arose) meditation on the Upāya and Prajñāpāramitā

Grünwedel and Cordier identify this man with Dharmakīrti.² If so, this saint would appear twice in our series.³ But our siddha might be a different person, identical with the learned man gSergliñpa whom we find in the small work "The road to Śambhala".⁴ A gSergliñpa is mentioned in the Tangyur. Kamalarakṣita and Atiśa are said to have been disciples of gSergliñgi blama.⁵

¹ Grünwedel, Geschichten, Fig. 2. — My translation is somewhat different from Grünwedel's. I think it is justified by the text of the litany.

² Bibliotheca Buddhica VI: 40. — Cordier III 277 (vol. 7, 3). Cf. Cordier III 357 (vol. 33, 87), III 309 (vol. 27, 6 and 7), III 326 (vol. 31, 4), II 356 (vol. 69, 120), II 498 (vol. 128, 9).

Cordier identifies him with Dharmapāla. A lama gSergliñpa is mentioned as the author of the "chogs kyi bdag po khro bo'i sgrub thabs" l.c. 221 (vol. 83, 59). Cordier identifies him with Dharmakīrti. Cf. Cordier III 216 (vol. 83, 37). — Cordier III 309 (vol. 27 n. 7, 16). — The work "'phags pa mi gyo ba'i sgrub thabs" is in the Tangyur ascribed to gSergliñpa; Sendai, n. 3059.

BHA VA PA = BHA VA PA

The inscription contains as a title: "oil-merchant":

mar nag mkhen¹ bha va pa la na mo

Glory to the oil-merchant Bhavapa

The litany also states his trade and his caste and goes on with his spiritual proficiencies:

/ gdol pa'i rigs la mar nag mkhan /
 / phyag rgya ma dañ dños grub brñes /
 / bha va pa žes bya ba yi⁴ /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Bhavapa
 Who won mudrā and perfection
 An oil-merchant in a low caste

The story of an oil-merchant is found as number 62 of the "Geschichten". He is called Deli and lived in Satapurī. He was converted by the pandit Bhahana. Our siddha is probably the same man.² The Bubapa number 20 in the Čhalugs might be a misspelling of Bhavapa.³

² Cordier II, 205 (45, 7). — Cf. Cordier II, 79 (vol. 21, 24).

³ Excursus II.

⁴ Oslo Tangyur: bir ya pa ~.

KON KA NA = KON KA NA

The inscription calls him a siddha:

grub thob koñ ka na la na mo

Glory to the siddha Koñkana

According to the invocation of the litany he was a master of poetry and went to heaven together with his family:

/ bram ze'i rigs la sñan ñag mkhan⁶ /
 / bu smad bčas śiñ mkha' la gśegs /
 / koñ ka na žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Koñkana
 Who went sky-wards together with his family
 A master of poetry in the brahmin caste

I do not think that this siddha has anything to do with the king Kañkaṇa in story number 29 of the "Geschichten". He might be identical with the Koñkanapāda-Kokadatta enumerated in the Sāadhanamālā.¹ This author specialized in works on the Vajravārāhī-Vajrayoginī. Or he might be identical with the author Kañkana in the Tangyur who composed the "spyod pa'i do ha mjad kyi glu žes bya ba".² Bhattacharyya considers him a contemporary of Anaṅgavajra (present in our series).³ His devotee Hasavajra, as Tāranātha tells us, initiated Naggidbañphyuggrags. In this case he is called Koñkana Jinabhadra.⁴ An author Koñkanapāda or Koñkasbyin is mentioned in the Tangyur.⁵

KA MA = KA MĀ LA

This man is called a siddha in the inscription:

grub thob ka ma la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kama

The better form of the name is certainly preserved in the litany. The "la" has been mistaken for the Tibetan "dative". The litany informs us that the siddha was of the warrior-caste and "played the fool":

/ rgyal rigs lkugs pa'i spyod pa mjad /
 / gsañ spyod mchog gi dños grub brñes /
 / ka mĀ la žes bya ba yi³ /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kamāla
 Who got perfection in precious secrets
 A kṣatriya playing the fool

I do not think that this man is identical with the Kamala in Grünwedel's picture with the subscription:

sgra chad luñ rig la mkhas ka ma la but possibly with the "fool" Catrapa in the story number 23 of the "Geschichten". He lived in Sandhonagara and managed — with the help of a yogi — to obtain the Mahāmudrāsiddhi.²

¹ S. number 37 in our series. — There is a possibility of our Kamala being identical with the Kamala of the Alchi monastery; Francke, l.c. 91.

³ Oslo Tangyur: pa ka pa la žes bya ba'i.

TAM PA KA = TAM PA KA

The inscription gives him the title "copper-smith":

spraṅs mgar tam pa ka la na mo

Glory to the copper-smith Tampaka

We learn from the litany that he was a member of the brahmin-caste and wonderfully swift-footed:

/ bram ze'i rigs la zaṅs mgar lus /
 / rju 'phrul rkaṅ mgyogs dños grub brñes /
 / tam pa ka žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Tampaka
 Who got perfection, wondrously swift-footed
 A copper-smith in the brahmin caste

The subscription of a picture reproduced by Grünwedel tells with greater brevity the same facts:

bram rigs zaṅs mgar rkaṅ mgyogs tam pa ka¹
 Tampaka the swift-footed copper-smith of brahmin-caste

Story number 45 of the "Geschichten" probably tells of his achievements. Taught by a yogi he obtained the Mahāmudrāsiddhi after six years' exercises. In the Tangyur we find him as Kamari or Kamparipa.²

² Cordier II, 241.

GHI NA PA = BHI NA SA

In the inscription he is called "siddha":

grub thob ghi na pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Ghinapa

From the litany we learn of his musical talents, also that he saw the Thugsdam and departed skywards:

/ rgyal rigs pi vañ gliñ bu 'khrul /
 / thugs dam žal gzigs mkha' la gśegs /
 / bhi na sa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Bhinasa
 Who saw the Thugsdam, went skywards,
 Played¹ the lute and flute, of warrior-caste

The name, though misspelt, is easily recognizable. This man is the siddha Viṇāpāda whose story is told in number 11 of the "Geschichten". He was a prince, we are told, who loved to play the lute. In our picture he carries a flute in his right hand. According to the Tangyur he composed the "rdo rje mkha' 'gro ma'i rjogs pa'i rim pa". The Vajraḍākinī might be the Thugsdam. Our siddha is said to be of Virūpa-Birvapa's lineage.² He is called Vinapa, Pivaṇpa, Pivaṇbrduñ, ~ žabs.³

PU TA LO KI = SU TA LO KI

The inscription calls him "siddha":

grub thob pu ta lo ki la na mo

Glory to the siddha Putaloki

From the litany we learn that he was a brahmin and attained to perfection:

/ bram ze'i rigs la dman pa'i lus /
 / smad 'choñ ma dañ dños grub brñes /
 / su ta lo ki žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Sutaloki
 Who won the harlot and perfection
 An insignificant person in the caste of brahmins

It is difficult to believe that our brahmin is the Putali in number 78 of the "Geschichten". This latter is said to have been a man of the śūdracaste in Bengal. Such differences in tradition, however, do occur.

This siddha in our scroll is sitting on a tortoise, an animal totally absent in the "Geschichten". Among the great men of the Faith the third Pančhenlama enumerates, between rDorjedrilbu and Jalandharapa, one Russbalžabs "Tortoise-lord", Kacchapapāda.¹ He is also mentioned by Tāranātha,² and Sumpa, and in the Blue Annals.³

A third possibility would be the author Tali-Putalipa-Sutali-Putralipa in the Tangyur, where an author "dpal ldan po ta la ka'i rje bcun" is also found.⁴

² Tāranātha, Edelsteinmine 59, 168.

³ Sumpa mKhanpo 143, 109. Blue Annals II 803 (Kūrmapāda).

⁴ The first author's Tibetan name is "rgyan slañ ba"; Cordier II, 245, Sendai 2418. — Cordier III, 92. — A Bhatalipa appears l.c. II 231.

DHARMA KIRTI = DHA RMĀ KĪ RTI

He is called a mahāpaṇḍita in the inscription, a title very rarely bestowed:

pan chen dharma kirti la na mo

Glory to the mahāpaṇḍita Dharmakirti

The litany lays stress on his capacities as a learned man and says he was of the heretics' caste:

/ mu stegs rigs la sgra chad mkhan /

/ phyir rgol char bčad mkha' la gśegs /

/ dha rmā kī rti' zes bya ba'i /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called Dharmākīrti

Who went skywards having defeated the opponent

A grammarian-logician, of heretics' caste

This siddha seems to be identical with the great saint and pandit of the 7th century who fought the brahmins and who is recorded as one of "Jambudvīpa's six ornaments". In the Pantheon of the 300 he is called Čhosgrags. Grünwedel has reproduced a picture of him. He was usually considered a learned teacher rather than a "siddha". His teacher, however, was the siddha Tēnki. Tāranātha states that tantrism was secretly transmitted from the time of Asaṅga to that of Dharmakīrti.² He is painted in the lhakhañ of the Alchi monastery,³ and is number 19 in the Description of the 84 siddhas.⁴

³ Francke, l.c. 91.

⁴ Excursus II.

KU MĀ RA = KU MĀ RA

From the inscription we learn his title "siddha":

grub thob ku mā ra la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kumāra

The litany says that he was a shoemaker — lham mkhan — and attained to perfection in the burial-place:

/ lha(m) mkhan rigs la skal bar ldan /
 / dur khrod gnas su dños grub brñes /
 / ku mā ra žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kumāra
 Who won perfection in the burial-ground
 A blessed one in the caste of shoemakers

Probably he is the Kolpagismkhan-Carmakara in the Description of the 84 siddhas.¹ The "Geschichten" contain one story of a shoemaker-siddha, number 14. His name is Cāmāra (sanskrit: carma-kāra). Our name "Kumāra" very probably has its origin in a misspelling of this name, possibly under the influence of another siddha's name meaning "potter".² The shoemaker of the story asked instruction from a passing yogi for himself and his wife. After having been taught by him he meditated and gained liberation. — The man seen beside the shoemaker in our picture would be the yogi. The Kumāra of our scroll is probably identical with the Kumara painted in the lhakhañ of Alchi.³ Sumpa mKhanpo speaks of a mahāsiddha Camaripa.⁴

² Number 63 in Grünwedel's series.

³ Francke l.c. 91. — Cordier vol. 48, 55 records a Camari, Beng. Cāmār, Hind. Camār. — He might be mentioned as Kumara or Kumāra in the Tangyur. Cf. Cordier III, 450 (vol. 112, 4).

⁴ Sumpa mKhanpo 125.

CHEM BU PA = CHE 'U PA

The inscription calls him "dge chul", novice or-priest:

dge chul chem bu pa la na mo

Glory to the dgechul Chembupa

The litany also gives him this title in religion as well as details of his success:

/ dge chul lus pa mje mo mkhur¹ /
 / ga ngar bzugs nas mkha' la gśegs /
 / che 'u pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Che'upa
 Who went skywards having dwelled at the Gaṅgā
 An upāsaka, carrying the beautiful one

The siddha's name means "tailor". In story 69 we read of a tailor who obtained the help of the skywalker Vetāli and finally the Mahāmudrāsiddhi. The "mjemo" he carries is probably Vetāli, whom, in the picture, he is seen carrying on his back.

NI LA PA = NI LA PA

The title "siddha" is given in the inscription:

grub thob ni la pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Nilapa

"nilā" means "indigo", and "nilapa" the "indigo-man", "indigo-maker". The litany uses this word as a personal name while his trade is indicated by the use of the pure Tibetan word "rams mkhan":

/ rams mkhan lus la dge bsñen lus /
 / chañs spyod o rgyan gnas na bžugs⁴ /
 / ni la pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Nilapa
 Who dwelled in Orgyan, wholly purified
 A lay-follower, an indigo-maker

No indigo-maker appears among the 84 stories translated by Grünwedel, nor have I met him in other sources — where he of course might be called by a name other than his trade-name.¹ A Nilāpāda is found as number 25 in the Bauddha gān o dohā,² and a Nilipa as 83 in the Čhalugs.³

¹ "rams mkhan" is found in the Dictionnaire. This paint came from India. The word of "dyer" is: chos rgyag pa.

² Bauddha gān o dohā. — An author Nilakhandha is recorded Cordier II, 246.

³ Excursus I.

⁴ Oslo Tangyur: — u rgyan —.

PADMA KA RA = PADMA KA RA

In the inscription we are given the bare name:

padma ka ra la na mo

Glory to Padmakara

In the litany "the lotusplanter (?)" is said to have subdued a demon:

/ dge sloñ lus kyi phyag rgya bsten /
 / lho nub srin po'i kha gnon mjad /
 / padma ka ra zes bya ba'i² /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Padmakara
 Who subdued the demon of the south-west,
 Demonstrated the mudrā of a dgesloñ

"Padmākara" is stated to be one of Padmasambhava's many names but a separate Padmākara is also known. He is said to have worked on the island Dramila. A Padmākara has composed and translated works extant in the Tangyur. He seems to be identical with one Muktaka who composed sādhanas. Bhattacharyya places him about 1100.¹

¹ Tāranātha, Čhosbyuñ 264 and Edelsteinmine 49. Sāadhanamālā II cv. f. — Cordier III, 179 (vol. 82, 14). — l.c. III 30 (vol. 71, 145).

² Oslo Tangyur: padma kā ra ~.

SEÑNHIPIA = SEÑNE PA

The inscription calls him "siddha":

grub thob seññhipa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Seññhipa

The litany shows him mounted on a lion and informs us that he belonged to the "skin-caste":

/ śan pa'i rigs la skal bar ldan /
 / señ ge žon nas spyod pa mjad /
 / señne pa žes bya ba yi¹ /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Señnepa
 Who acted, mounted on a lion,
 A blessed one in the skin-caste²

The spelling of his name seems to have been doubtful and the printers seem to have been troubled about it. In the edition of the Tangyur now preserved in Marburg the name looks like "siddhi pa". Should this be the more correct spelling of the name³ our siddha might be identical with the siddha Siddhapāda mentioned in the Haṭhayogapradīpikā.⁴ The corrupt spelling could be easily explained by his being mounted on a lion. "d" and "ñ" in Tibetan writing and even in Tibetan print can easily be mistaken.⁵

² Cf. Cordier III, 262 (vol. 86, 66) with siddha in the Mongolian index instead of Sumatisiñha.

³ Haṭhayogapradīpikā 8.

⁴ One of the authors in the Tangyur is called slobdpon Śrisiñpha-Śrisiñña, Cordier III, 182 (vol. 82, 22), III 233 (vol. 85, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5), as translator l.c. 6, 7, 8, 9. Again as author III 235 (vol. 85, 10, 11, 12), 237 (l.c. 17).

MI NA DA PA = MI NA DA PA

He is called "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob mi na da pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Minadapa

He belonged to the caste of fishermen, says the litany, and obtained perfection on an island in the sea:

/ ña pa'i rigs la dge bsñen lus /
 / rgya mcho'i gliñ du dños grub brñes /
 / mi na da pa žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Minadapa
 Who won perfection on an island in the sea
 An upāsaka in the caste of fishermen

This siddha is certainly identical with the hero of number 8 of the "Geschichten". Like the prophet Jonah he was swallowed by a large fish, and, inside its belly he managed to meditate for twelve years. He got abhiṣeka from Maheśvara. Our saint is referred to by the name Mīna in the Haṭhayogapradīpikā and elsewhere.¹

SPRIN GYI ŚUGS ČAN = SPRIN GYI ŚUGS ČAN

The man is called "king" (rgyal po) in the inscription:

rgyal po sprin gyi śugs čan

King sPringyiśugsčan

The litany, however, does not call him "king" but merely states that he belongs to the kṣatriya-caste, and is a learned man:

/ rgyal rigs rig pa'i gnas lha mkhas /
 / nam mkha'i lha dañ the chom med⁶ /
 / sprin gyi śugs čan žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called sPringyiśugsčan
 The sky-lord, liberated from scruples
 Of warrior-caste, master in the five branches of learning

An author sPringyiśugsčan is mentioned in the Tangyur.¹ I think he is identical with our siddha. The author in the Tangyur is called "rgyal bu", not "rgyal po", "prince", not "king". The latter is probably a misreading. The same man apparently appears in the Blue Annals where he is called a prince of Koñkana.² He is said to have been one of the seventy two teachers of the renowned 'Gos. The third Pančhenlama enumerates him between Naggidbañphyuggragspa and Sumatikirti.³ In a painting in New York owned by Mr. Minkenhof our siddha is shown wearing royal ornaments. He is called "rgyal po" there.⁴ As "lama" probably the same man is found in Sumpa mKhanpo's work.⁵ His name stands after the mahāsiddha Nagpospyodpa's. — According to Mahāvvyutpatti 1555—1559 the "five branches of learning (Pañcavidyāsthānāni)" are:

sgra'i rig pa
 gtan chigs kyi rig pa
 nañ gi rig pa

KA RU PA = KA RU PA KA

This man in our scroll steers a coracle, at boat made of skin drawn over a wooden structure; the title "siddha" is given in the inscription:

grub thob ka ru pa

Siddha Karupa

The litany says he was a ferryman, and belonged to the tharu-caste:

/ tha ru rigs la mñan pa'i lus /
 / sdug bsñal rgya mcho kun las rgal /
 / ka ru pa ka zes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Karupaka
 Who sailed over all the seas of misery
 A ferryman in the tharu-caste

A painting of three siddhas in New York owned by Mr. Minkenhof shows the same siddha. Here his name is given as Kāmarūpa.¹ I have not found this man in other sources.² The "tharu" are a caste or tribe in Nepal. They are said to be akin to the Newar.³ The Description of the 84 siddhas contains (51) a "ku ma ru pa", in another text called "ka ma ru pā."⁴ He cannot be identified with Tāranātha's Karopa who is the son of a king. (mtha ru also = people in the borderland).

² The Tangyur mentions one Karopa, to whom a work of Klusgrubsñiñpo was transmitted. Cordier II, 222 (vol. XLVII, 19); also II 219 (XLVI, 45). He is called Karmapāda.

³ Cf. "tha ru'i brgyud" Sumpa mKhanpo 26. Cf. also Wassiljew, "Vorrede", Mitg. v. A. Schiefner 1869, 9.

⁴ Cf. Excursus II. — As to the "ka ma ru pa'i ña pa zig": Sumpa mKhanpo 125 cf. Minadapa n. 51.

This flying siddha is called "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob si ri pa

Siddha Siripa

He mastered the four classes of tantras, the litany tells us:

/ rgyud sde bži'i sgra don mkhas /
 / dbaṅ bži rjogs nas mkha' la gśegs /
 / da si ri pa žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Dasiripa
 Who went skywards having completed the four initiations¹
 A master of word-sense of the four classes of tantras

Under the name "Dha ri pa" this same siddha undoubtedly appears in a painting owned by Mr. Minkenhof of New York. The Kloṅrdol-list of siddhas reproduced by Tucci gives as number 72: Dhasuripa.² Number 21 in the Description of the 84 siddhas is called "Ka ši ri pa" and n. 50 "dha ki pa" or "dha sa ki pa".³ Similar though not identical names occur elsewhere. Grünwedel reproduces a picture of one Sisiripa.⁴ We get a description of a Kusiripa (probably Virūpa) from the "grub čhen brgyud ču'i rjes gnaṅ bya chul".⁵ The same work mentions a Kasiripa. One of Virūpa's existence-forms is called Siropa.⁶ Among Nāropa's pupils there is a Riripa and a Kasi-ripa.⁷ A work "dbaṅ bži pa'i rnam par bžag pa" is known.⁸

A NA NTA = A NA NTA

On this solitary man under a tree with two birds the inscription confers the title "siddha":

grub thob a na nta

Siddha Ananta

The litany tells us the caste he belonged to and emphasizes his unhindered mind:

/ bram ze'i rigs la spyod pa byed /
 / rtog med sems la rañ dbañ thob /
 / a na nta zes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Ananta
 Who reached freedom with an unhindered mind,
 Performing his deeds in the brahmin caste

Probably our siddha is identical with the siddha Ananta, whose picture is published by Grünwedel with the subscription:

bram ze'i rigs čan rtog bral a na nta¹
 Ananta, the unhindered, of brahmin-caste

Grünwedel hesitatingly identifies him with the hero of story number 58 who is a minister of a king in Bengal and of brahmin caste. This identification might well be correct, though there is nothing in the story that could explain our picture of Ananta, where he holds a human head and seems to pull at its tongue — reminding us somewhat of the Vetāla-story told by Tāranātha,² and popularly known through one of Mme David-Neel's books. I rather think our siddha is the Indian pandit, spoken of as one of the 25 Indian pandits, in the Padmasambhava-legend.³ This siddha is probably painted in the lhakhañ of Alchi.⁴

³ Toussaint 280—33, 283—10. — He cannot very well be the Ananta Buston speaks of, a pandit contemporary with Buston's own teacher. Buston speaks of a Kashmirian pandit Ananta contemporary with Śāntarakṣita; cf. Tattvasaṃgraha of Śāntarakṣita. With the commentary of Kamalaśīla ed. by Embar Krishnamacharya 1926, Forword. As the author of "le'u ñer bži ba'i rgya čher 'grel don gsal bar byed pa zes bya ba" we find him in the Tangyur, Cordier III 148 (vol. 76, 5). A translator Ananta Cordier III 371 (vol. 38, 6). SEÑGE PA = SE ÑGE PA

The bare name is recorded in the inscription:

señge pa

Señgepa

According to the litany he was blessed by sPyanrasgzigs:

/ spyan ras gzigs kyis byin gyis brlabs /
 / bum pa thogs nas dri ma khrud /
 / se ñge pa zes bya pa yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Señgepa
 Who, having seized the bumpa, washed off dirt,
 Blessed by sPyanrasgzigs

In our picture the siddha is surrounded by sea-monsters. This would suggest his identity with the siddha Samudra in story number 83 of Grünwedel's collection of stories. As other names of Samudra Grünwedel quotes "rgya mcho nas nor bu len mkhan zig" (the one who fetches riches out of the sea) and Señgepa. Story number 83 is quite short and gives no hint as to the vision in our scroll. The litany suggests Avalokiteśvara. The vision itself looks more like his śakti Tārā.

This man may have composed the work "phra ba'i rnal 'byor zes bya ba" in the Tangyur.¹

ZLA BA BZAÑ PO = ZLA BA BZAÑ PO

He wears a king's crown in our picture. The inscription calls him, not king, but siddha:

grub thob zla ba bzañ po

Siddha Zlababzañpo

The litany says that he was of brahmin caste and a begging yogi:

/ bram ze'i rigs la rnal 'byor lus /
 / ldom bu mjad cññ dños grub brñes /
 / zla ba bzañ po žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Zlababzañpo
 Who won perfection begging alms
 A yogi in the brahmin caste

This is rather vague. We know of a king Zlababzañpo to whom the fundamental Kālacakra-tantra was revealed. He composed a summary and a commentary and transmitted his work to the people of Śambhala.¹ We find a king Zlababzañpo in books once brought by Alexander Csoma de Körös and now preserved in the library of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences.² In the Tangyur we meet a paṇḍita Zlababzañpo who among other works translated some by the authoress Grubpa'irgyalmo,³ a king Zlababzañpo who made a commentary,⁴ and a slobdpon čhenpo Zlababzañpogragspa'idpal as an author⁵. Cordier identifies Zlababzañpo with Karmavajra's disciple Thañlopa.⁶

KUN DGA' SÑIÑ PO = KUN DGA' SÑIÑ PO

The siddha stares upwards ecstatically. The inscription tells us no more than the name:

kun dga' sñiñ po la na mo

Glory to Kundga'sñiñpo

He was blessed by the White Tārā the litany informs us:

/ sgrol ma dkar mos byin gyis brlabs /
 / rnal 'byor rgyud la 'brel pa mjad⁵ /
 / kun dga' sñiñ po žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kundga'sñiñpo
 Who made commentaries to Yogatantra(s)¹
 Blessed by the White sGrolma

Tāranātha speaks of a Kundga'sñiñpo who lived in the time of the king Mahāpāla. He was a native of Magadha. He went to Bhaṅgala to study the yogatantras. He preached, having been invited by the king, and also composed commentaries. He is said to have beheld the "rdo rje dbyiñs kyi dkyil 'khor čhen po", when striving in the woods for perfection.² In the Tangyur we find works ascribed to a Kundga'sñiñpo, and among these the "rdo rje dbyiñs kyi dkyil 'khor čhen po'i čho ga rdo rje thams čad 'byuñ ba žes bya ba".³ This is evidently the same man, and probably identical with the siddha invoked in the litany and painted in the scroll. The same man, I think, is painted in the lhakhañ of the Alchi monastery where he was seen by Francke.⁴

¹ The Yogatantra was reserved for those who were considered fit to come into contact with the śaktis. Cf. Bhattacharyya, Sādhana-mālā II, XLVI. 'brel ba': 'grel ba.

⁵ Oslo Tangyur: — 'grel ba —.

ZLA BA GRAGS PA = ZLA BA GRAGS PA

He is dressed in monk's garb and the litany calls him "teacher":

slob dpon zla ba grags pa la na mo

Glory to the teacher Zlabagragspa

He was born a Mañjuśrī-sprulpa, as we learn from the invocation of the litany, and he had impressed Nāgārjuna on his mind:

/ 'jam dpal sku'i sprul par 'khrunś /
 / klu sgrub dgoñs pa thugs la čhud /
 / zla ba grags pa žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Zlabagragspa
 Pondering Klusgrub, impressing him on the mind
 Born a Mañjuśrī-sprulpa

This Zlabagragspa-Candrakīrti ought certainly to be the well-known rival of Candragomin whom our series calls Candrapa. They had dealings with each other, and Mañjuśrī played an important rôle.¹ In fact an image of Mañjuśrī turned his head on a certain occasion. It was a problem concerning buddhist etiquette: should Candragomin who was only an upāsaka be ceremonially received by the clergy or not? — The Blue Annals record Candrakīrti as one of the four foremost pupils of Nāgārjuna,² and Buston says Candrakīrti relied on Nāgārjuna and Āryadeva.³ In the Tangyur we meet the man as a translator and an author.⁴ He is one of Nāgārjuna's commentators. Francke saw a fresco of him in the lhakhañ of the Alchi-monastery.⁵

Our picture in itself rather suggests Abhayākaragupta such as Grünwedel shows him, with a snake.⁶ With the help of a huge snake he once frightened a king into releasing prisoners condemned to be sacrificed.⁷

⁷ He is said to have evolved the rDor-phreñ-maṇḍala; Rin 'byun 12.

SMAD DKRIS PA = SMAD BKRIS PA

The title "siddha" is given in the inscription:

grub thob smad dkris pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha sMaddkrispa

He dwelt naked in the cemetery, as we are informed in the invocation of the litany, and saw Acala face to face:

/ mi gyo žal gzigs spyod pa mjad /
 / gčer bu brtul žugs dur khrod gnas /
 / smad bkris pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called sMaddkrispa
 Who dwelt in the cemetery, naked,¹
 Did the deed, beheld Migyo

I have not found a siddha named *sMaddkrispa*² in other accessible sources. Nāgopa, a pupil of king Karṇaripa,³ is also described as "naked".

The Thugsdam Migyo-Acala we find depicted in the left upper corner of the scroll. He is white and carries a short sword in his right hand. Nāgārjuna also relied on Acala who is the khrodha for moha — bewilderment — of the Vajrayāna and the special protector of the Bromston-sect.⁴

¹ "brtul" should here, I think, be understood in its proper meaning, and not = btul as in Citrakṣaṇa 136.

² Similarly the Tangyur preserved in Marburg has: smad dkris pa.

³ Tāranātha, Edelsteinmine 13. — "gčer bu pa" is the name of a sect of ascetics, rivals of the early Buddhists; cf. Citrakṣaṇa, 6. — The pretas are called "naked", l.c. v. 272, p. 81: "khyod kyis yi dags gčer thul śog". — A gčerbuthul is mentioned among the authors of the Tangyur; Cordier III, 475 (vol. 123, 6). The work is called "ri mo'i mchan ŋid (citrakṣaṇa). — An Āryācalasādhana by Aśokaśrī in Cordier II, 280 (vol. 61, 19). An author Seṅgemigyoba l.c. II 300 (vol. 68, 17).

⁴ Cf. G. Tucci, Tibetan Painted Scrolls I, 238. H. Hoffmann, Quellen z. Geschichte der tibetischen Religion. 1950, 128.

KHYU RA PA = KAR NA PA

The inscription and the litany give varying titles. In the inscription he is described as "siddha".

grub thob khyu ra pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Khyurapa

The litany, on the other hand, calls him "king" and shows him reaching perfection:

/ rgyal po dman pa'i spyod pa mjad /
 / rigs ñan ma dañ dños grub brñes /
 / kar na pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Karnapa
 Who won a woman of low-caste (?) and perfection
 A king doing menial work

Tucci's third list of siddhas in Tibetan Painted Scrolls has: Ko ra ña pa as the name of this siddha.¹ But the number of syllables makes "kar na pa" more probable. There seems be no corresponding figure amongst the kings of the "Geschichten".² He might be the king Karṇaripa whom we find in Tāranātha's work.³ The Description of the 84 siddhas contains (42) a "Kar nag po", in another list called "Kar na pa".⁴

¹ This would come near to Cauraṅgi.

² Story 73 deals with a king Kirava with a different story. In number 60, to which the flowers might point, the king is called Campaka.

³ Tāranātha, Edelsteinmine, 123.

⁴ Cf. Excursus II.

A VA DHU DHI PA = A VA DHŪ TI

The inscription merely tells us the name of this smiling man:

a va dhu dhi pa la na mo

Glory to Avadhutipa

The litany tells us the name of his protectress and some of his achievements:

/ thugs rje sgrol mas byin gyis brlabs /
 / gnod sbyin 'jigs pa brgyad las thar^{1a} /
 / a ba dhū ti¹ žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Avadhūti
 Freed from the eight frightful gNodsbyin²
 Blessed by Thugsrjesgrolma

He is certainly identical with the Avadhutižabs reproduced by Grünwedel, whose picture has the subscription:

sgrol mas 'jigs skyabs a ba dhu ti žabs³
 Avadhutižabs protected by Tārā (from the) frightful (ones?)

Grünwedel thinks our siddha is identical with the siddha Meko (number 43 in his collection). Maitripa seems to be called Avadhuti as well as Advaya-vajra.⁴ The Blue Annals mention the Great Avadhūti as a pupil of Virūpa.⁵ A teacher (slobdpon) Avadhutipa is said to have composed the work "chogs kyī bdag po'i sgrub thabs 'khor lo čhen po žes bya ba". In fact "avadhūti" is one of the three principal "arteries" later taken as women in the ordinary sense.⁶ In consequence "avadhutipa" as a name implies a certain stage in development and might be given to several persons.⁷

None of the works in the Tangyur expressly ascribed to an Avadhūti or Avadhutipa seem to treat the Thugsrjesgrolma or the gNodsbyin, judging from their titles.⁸

² Cf. "jigs pa brgyad las thar pa'i dños grub" = aṣṭamahābyayasiddhi, Formulaire Sanscrit-Tibétain ed. p. J. Hackin. Mission Pelliot en Asie Centrale. Ser. Pet. in-Oct. T. II, 1924, 23.

⁷ Cf. Nagendra Narayan Chaudhuri in Calcutta Sanscrit Series X. 1935, 11.

⁸ An Avadhūti-pa gZonnuzlaba occurs as an author Cordier II 160 (vol. 42, 5). — An Avadhūta Kamala is mentioned l.c. III 120 (vol. 74, 12), cf. also III 80 (vol. 71, 405). Tāranātha speaks of an Avadhūti-yogi Ratnaśīla from Kāmaru, Tāranātha, Edelsteinmine 99, cf. n. 3 above. — The leaf-shoes on our mahāsiddha's feet might possibly hint at the acquisition of one of the siddhis; to wit, miraculous swiftfootedness. — It might be noted that the "Maitripa-prayer" in the Pantheon of the 300 does not mention the sGrolma but sPyanrasgzigs.

⁹ The Thugsrjesgrolma seems to be a speciality of rTagpa'irdorje, Sendai 1737, 1741. — The work "'jigs pa brgyad rmoṅs par byed pa'i i thabs žes bya ba" is ascribed to Bhakhana, Cordier vol. 38, 87. Works of the same kind are attributed to Marmemjadyeśes, Thamsčad mkhenpa'i-bśesgñen and Yeśesrdorje, Sendai 3687, 3681, 3032. Cf. Cordier II 124 (vol. 26, 60), III 72 (vol. 71, 370, cf. 369). A similar work is ascribed to Atiśa III 76 (vol. 71, 386).

¹⁰ Oslo Tangyur: gnod byed ~.

KAD NA PA = CA RA PA

He is called a "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob kad na pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kadnapa

His spiritual achievements we learn from the invocation of the litany:

/ rca rlañ thabs kyī lam la mkhas /
 / 'byuñ ba rluñ la rañ dbañ thob /
 / ca ra pa zes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Carapa
 A master of the element wind
 A master of the vein-wind¹

I have not found this man in other sources.²

² A Kaccha — Kacapāda known to Sumpamkhanpo and Tāranātha can hardly be considered. — Cf. the author Carpaḍi Cordier III, 250 (vol. 86, 8). — The work "rca rluñ gi [thig le'i] sgom nas rnal 'byor gyi spyod pa zes bya ba" is attributed to the siddha Ḍombipa Cordier II, 239 (vol. 48, 63) = Khrusmkhan.

ŚĀKYA BŚES GÑEN = ŚĀKYA BŚES GÑEN

In the inscription we are told the bare name:

śākya bśes gñen la na mo

Glory to Śākyabśesgñen

The litany tells us his caste, and the special line of development he followed:

/ śiñ thun rigs la dños grub brñes /
 / theg čhen klu sgrub rjes su 'brañs /
 / śākya bśes gñen žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Śākyabśesgñen
 Who followed Mahāyāna and Nāgārjuna
 Who got perfection, of the wood-gatherers' caste

The Blue Annals mention Śākyabśesgñen among Nāgārjuna's four foremost pupils.¹ Tāranātha says that he has heard of a Mahāśākyamitra, but has not seen his biography.² The Padmasambhava-legend mentions a man called by the same name. So does Grünwedel.³ Similarly an author in the Tangyur has this name.⁴ Buston mentions Śākyamitra.⁵ The siddha is mentioned among the spiritual ancestors of the lČaṅskya Rolpa'irdorje.⁶

CA ṆḌA LI = CA ṆḌA LI

This gruesome picture, where the tantric couple sit on a human hide, is subscribed merely with the name and the invocation-formula:

ca ṇḍa li la na mo

Glory to Caṇḍali

He was of the fishermens' caste, says the litany, and went naked:

/ ña pa'i rigs la rca rluñ mkhan /
 / bde ba lam sloñs gčer bu mjad /
 / ca ṇḍa li žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Caṇḍali
 Naked, walking the happy road,
 A vein-wind-master in the caste of fishermen

We have met one "naked" siddha already, sMaddkrispa (number 60). "caṇḍali" like "avadhūti" is the "channel" for the mystical "wind" and is here probably taken as a personal name for Caṇḍalipa. This "wind-master" might be known under another name elsewhere. One might think of siddha 56 of the "Geschichten" who does not appear elsewhere in our series, and who seems to be identical with the author of the "gtum mo'i thig le bkram pa žes bya ba" in the Tangyur.¹ But he is said to have been a brahmin. The queerly stretched human hide (both hands on one side!) might denote some particularly fierce enemy of heretics or Mohammedans such as Kholpodga'.² The corpse's nose is long and curved, its hands are held in the "mano cornuta"-fashion.³

² Grünwedel, Mythologie 39.

³ As to "caṇḍali" cf. Sh. Dasgupta, Obscure Religious Cults as Background of Bengal Literature, 1946, 118 f. — A. gČerbuthul (author) is mentioned Cordier III 475 (vol. 123, 6).

GLU DBYAÑS MKHAN = KLU DBYAÑS MKHAN

He is called a siddha in the inscription:

grub thob glu dbyaṅs mkhan la na mo

Glory to the siddha Gludbyaṅsmkhan

The litany says he saw the Thugsdam — not specified — and was a poet:

/ rab 'byuñ rten la skoñ ba mjad¹ /
 / thugs dam žal gzigs mkha' la gśegs /
 / klu¹ dbyaṅs mkhan žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Gludbyaṅsmkhan
 Who saw the Thugsdam, departed skywards,
 A maker of prayer songs² of the clergy

I have not identified this siddha.³ The divinity beside him does not belong to "the singer", but to another siddha.

¹ The Tangyur preserved in Marburg has: glu dbyaṅs.

² Saṅgiti. — The "Vimuktamañjari žes bya ba glu dbyaṅs" is Cordier III 112 said to be composed by Jalandhara'i žabs, possibly different from our brahmin J. and identical with the low-caste monk spoken of by Tāranātha (Edelsteinmine 58—59). — Poets are mentioned Cordier III 88, II 161. — A "glu dbyaṅs" of Bharanātha l.c. III 271. — Cf. also Tāranātha, Čhosbyuñ 147, 160.

³ I doubt if he is identical with Śrīdhara who composed a sādhanā wholly in verse for Vajrasarasvatī. Cf. Sādhanaṃālā II CXVIII f.

⁴ Oslo Tangyur: — la bskor ba mjad /

BHA GHA = BHA GHA LA NA

The inscription calls him "siddha":

grub thob bha gha la na mo

Glory to the siddha Bhagha

The name in the litany is a little different. He is of brahmin caste, we are told, and a dgesloñ:

/ bram ze'i rigs la dge sloñ lus /
 / sbyaṅs pa bču gñis spyod pa mjad /
 / bha gha la na žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Bhaghalana
 Who performed the twelve acts,
 A dgesloñ in the brahmin-caste

I have not found this siddha in other sources.¹ The Description of the 84 siddhas contains a Pagalapapa.²

¹ In Tucci's list we find the name "vha gha la na". — As to the twelve acts cf. Buston I 133—136, II 7 ff. — I do not think he has anything to do with the monk Ghagha (Tāranātha, Edelsteinmine 149) or with the Buddhist assembly hall Bhāgā-Bhājā (Bimala Churn Law, Geography of Early Buddhism 1932, 79), nor with the translator Bhavyarāja Cordier III 452 (vol. 112, 14, 15). — A pandita Bhagupa is one of the authors of "mchog gi sgrol ma ral pa gčig ma'i man ṅag gi bsgrub thabs" Cordier II 123 (vol. 26, 53). An author Vāgbhaṭa f.i. Sendai n. 4311.

² Excursus II, number 37. — A Bhavyavajra is mentioned in Tempel in Lhasa 53.

SGRA MKHAN ŽABS = SGRA MKHAN ŽABS

He is called a "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob sgra mkhan žabs la na mo

Glory to the siddha sGramkhanžabs

The litany says that he grasped the Mātṛka-tantra in the mountains:

/ ri khrod ma tri'i bgyud pa 'jin* /

/ phyag rgya čhen po thugs la śar /

/ sgra mkhan žabs žes bya ba yi /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called sGramkhanžabs

In his heart rose the Mahāmudrā

In the mountains he grasped the Mātṛka-tantra

Apparently he does not appear in Grünwedel's "Geschichten" but our siddha is certainly the same as the siddha in the picture reproduced by Grünwedel with the inscription:

ri khrod ma tri rgyud 'jin sgra mkhan žabs

sGramkhanžabs seizing the Mātṛka-tantra in the mountains¹

We may possibly identify him with the sGramkhanžabs who received the "do ha mjod čes bya ba" from Nagpopa and handed it on to Purapa² but hardly with the siddha number 10 in the Description of the 84 siddhas.³

² The line is: Birbapa — Nagpopa — sGramkhanžabs — Purapa — Śrī Vairocana, Cordier II 223 (vol. 47, 24). — An author sGradbyaṅs bču gčig pa is mentioned l.c. 140 (vol. 33, 27). — A translator sGramkhančhenporgyalbasñan is mentioned l.c. 303 (vol. 68, 29); the author is Carpaṭi. A translator sGra(pa)čhenpo jetakarna Cordier III 458 (vol. 116, 2, cf. 1).

³ Excursus II.

⁴ Oslo Tangyur: — mai tri'i —.

KON TA LI = KON TA LI

Only his name and the title “siddha” is given in the inscription:

grub thob kon ta li la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kontali

The litany mainly tells us about his ascetic behaviour:

/ dur khrod la sogs mtha ru bžugs /
 / skal ldan 'dul žiñ chogs 'khor mjad /
 / kon ta li žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kontali
 Happily conquering, making sacrificial offerings
 Dwelling in the cemetery and the outskirts

I have not met the name elsewhere and the facts given are very vague.¹

CA PA RI PA = CA PA RI

The scroll gives the name only, no title:

ca pa ri pa la na mo

Glory to Caparipa

According to the litany he beheld rTamgrin and departed skywards:

/ rta mgrin žal gzigs gdug pa 'dul /
 / 'dod yon spyod čin mkha' la gšegs /
 / ca pa ri žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Capari
 Who went skywards using wished-for goods,
 Subdued poison, beheld rTamgrin

The Hayagrīva is painted beside our siddha. He is the krodha of rāga — passion — of the Vajrayāna.¹ The siddha might be the hero of story number 64 of the “Geschichten”. But there is not much in the story to tally with the facts told in the litany.² rTamgrin is not mentioned in the story.

² A pupil of Śavaripa (number 27 in our series) called Japaripa or Caparipa is found Cordier II 198—199 (vol. 44, 54—56, 59), an author Carpaḍi Cordier III 250 (vol. 86, 8) and an author Carapati-Caripa l.c. II 244 (vol. 48, 85).

SI YA LI = SI YA LI

The inscription calls him a siddha:

grub thob si ya li la na mo

Glory to the siddha Siyali

He was of warrior-caste, the litany informs us, and partook of the Mahāmāṃsa in the cemetery:

/ rgyal rigs dman pa'i spyod pa mjad /
 / dur khrod rgyu žiñ śa čhen gsol /
 / si ya li žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Siyali
 Who ate the Mahāmāṃsa in the cemetery
 Who did menial work, of warrior-caste

Beyond doubt this man is identical with the siddha reproduced by Grünwedel with the subscription:

dur khrod śa čhen gsol ba si ya li
 Siyali eating the Mahāmāṃsa in the cemetery

In the Tangyur we find an author named sPyañkyipa¹ and the Description of the 84 Mahā-siddhas enumerates as number 41 a "lce spyañ žabs — jam bu ka pā da".² Our siddha would seem to be the hero of story number 21. Much afraid of the hyenas he was taught by a monk how to get rid of this fear. Finally he overcame it, and put a dead hyena on his shoulder, and went begging. True the story says its hero was a śūdra. Nevertheless I consider them identical.

ÑI MA SBAS PA = ÑI MA SBAS PA

The inscription calls him "siddha":

grub thob ñi ma sbas pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Ñimasbaspa

The litany informs us that he saw sGrolma in person, in fact he is looking up at a small White Tārā:

/ sgrol ma'i žal gzigs luñ yañ brtan /¹
 / gcug lag khañ du dños grub brñes /

 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Ñimasbaspa
 Who won perfection in the vihāra,
 Taught the Doctrine, saw sGrolma

He is probably identical with the Ñimasbaspa told of in Tāranātha's work.² This man was an ācārya in the time of king Śīla. He founded twelve schools and conjured up Tārā. According to Sumpa mKhanpo Ñimasbaspa was initiated into the Tārātantra by Nāgamitra.³ A Ñimasbaspa is mentioned among the authors of the Tangyur.⁴

NAG GI DBAÑ PHYUG = ÑAG GI BDAÑ PHYUG

He is called "siddha" in the inscription :

grub thob ñag gi dbaṅ phyug la na mo

Glory to the siddha Ñaggidbaṅphyug

He got eye-medicine, as we learn from the invocation of the litany, and belonged to the warrior-caste :

/ rgyal rigs ñi ma'i ther la gśegs /

/ ri lu mig sman sa 'og spyod /

/ ñag gi dbaṅ phyug žes bya ba'i /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called Ñaggidbaṅphyug

(He got) pills, eye-medicine, underground-walking

Went to the sun's treasure, of warrior caste

Our siddha might be the same as Ñaggidbaṅphyuggrags who is spoken of by Tāranātha.¹ This person asked the Cakrasamvaratantra of Hasavajra who was a follower of Koṅkana-Jinabhadra. He worked in Nālanda and Vikramaśīla, also in Nepal.

¹ Tāranātha, Čhosbyuñ (transl. :) 235. — A Ñaggidbaṅphyuggragspa is mentioned as the author of " 'jam pa'i dbyaṅs dpa' bo gčig grub pa'i bstod pa gser gyi phreṅ ba žes bya ba", Cordier III 177 (vol. 82, 6). Also as the author of " 'čhi ba blu ba'i bsdus don" l.c. III 167 (vol. 81, 19). Cf. l.c. III 75 (vol. 71, 380). — A. Vāgīśvara translated Kālacakra-works extant in the Tangyur, Cordier II 25 (vol. 5, 5—7). Cf. Lalou, Répertoire.

HI LA PA = HI LA PA

The inscription gives him the title "siddha":

grub thob hi la pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Hilapa

He belonged to a low caste, says the invocation of the litany, and was a bhikṣu:

/ dman pa'i rigs la dge sloñ lus /
 / gdan čig mjad čin dños grub brñes /
 / hi la pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Hilapa
 Who obtained perfection creating a seat
 A bhikṣu in a low caste

Śaṅkṛtyāyana gives the name "Hālīpā" in one of his lists. There the man is number 50, which would correspond to Hadinipa in Grünwedels "Geschichten". This "Medhina" was apparently of low caste but did not become a monk. Nor did he found a "seat". Tāranātha speaks of a siddha Hālī without giving any details as to his life or whereabouts.¹ The low caste would correspond to Hādi-siddha who is supposed to be identical with one of the siddhas called Jalandharipa.² He once made a path through a dense forest by his Huṃkāra. In the picture our siddha is dressed entirely in leaves. His name is possibly spelled "ti la pa" in the copy of the Tangyur preserved in Marburg.³

² Cf. Dasgupta Sh., Obscure Religious Cults as Background of Bengali Literature. 1945, 426, 436—7, 439—432, 452 ff.

³ The same spelling "Ti la pa" Tucci applies in list number III in Tibetan Painted Scrolls. — An author Kilapāda-Kirapa is mentioned Cordier II 234, (v. 48, 35), cf. Śaṅkṛtyāyana l.c. — An author Tilaka (Kalaśa) is mentioned Cordier III 302—3 (vol. 23, 2—4). — For leaves as clothing of Th. Jellinghaus in: Zeitschrift für Ethnologie. 1871, 328.

KA LA LAŅ KA = KA LA KA

According to the inscription he is a "siddha":

grub thob ka la lañ ka la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kalalañka

Mounted on an elephant he ranged through in the cemetery, we are told in the litany; we also learn that he subdued a king:

/ glañ čhen žon nas dur khrod rgyu /
 / rgyal po btul nas mkha' la gśegs /
 / ka la ka žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kalaka
 Who went skywards having subdued a king
 Ranged through the cemetery mounted on an elephant

A Kalakapa is mentioned in the Tangyur and number 68 of the stories tells of the siddha Kalakapa-Kalakala.¹ Among the siddhas found by Albert Grünwedel one is described as sitting on an elephant like our Kalalañka-Kalaka.² One can hardly think of Kāla who converted king Kanika.³

¹ Sendai 1503. Cordier II 48 (vol. 13, 52): Kalākapa. — In Fig. 10 the siddha is called "ka la ka", Grünwedel, Geschichten 226—227. — The name in the scroll "ka la lañ" reminds one of "kalanka" said to be a Tibetan loan word, cf. Nagendra Narayan Chaudhuri in Calcutta Sanscrit Series X, 1935, 7. The word means "blame" "spot".

² Cf. p. V.

³ Tāranātha, Čhosbyuñ. — Sumpa mKhanpo 126 speaks of a siddha Kalapa in connection with a cemetery. No elephant is mentioned.

KU BU CE = KU BU RCA

He is called "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob ku bu ce la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kubuce

The litany shows him putting the great serpent on his head and seeing bDemčhog:

/ bde mčhog žal gzigs spyod pa mjad /
 / dug sprul čhen po dbu la bčiñs /
 / ku bu rca žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kuburca
 Who put the great venomous serpent on his head
 Who did the deed, saw bDemčhog

I have not been able to trace this name. There is not much to connect him with the Kucipa of the stories, who gets the Guhyasamāja-initiation.¹

SEÑ GE PA = SEÑGE PA

The inscription calls him "siddha":

grub thob señ ge pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Señgepa

The invocation of the litany connects him with Orgyan and with an island in the sea:

/ rgya mcho'i gliñ du dka' thub mjad /

/ o rgyan gnas su dbaṅ bži rjogs /

/ señgepa žes bya ba yi /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called Señgepa

Who in Orgyan completed four initiations

Who was an ascetic on an island in the sea

I am not sure of this siddha's identity. Buston knows of a Señgebzañpo who belonged to the school of the Yogācāra-Mādhyamikas.¹

¹ Buston II 135. — Among the translators in the Tangyur there is a Señge-rgyalpo; Cordier II 247; also a Chulkrimsseñge, Cordier III 485 (vol. 123, 37); also a 'Phrogbyedseñge, Cordier III 255 (vol. 86, 32). An author Señge'igdančan (etc.) Cordier II 55 (vol. 14, 22). A Śrīsiñña, author and translator, Cordier III 235, 234, 233, 237 (vol. 85, 1—12). — The Śesrabsseñge of a later period can hardly be considered. As to Señgebzañpo cf. p. 74 (Señgepa) n. 1.

THOGS MED = THOG PA MED PA

The inscription gives one of the more unusual titles, that of "prince":

rgyal sras thogs med la na mo

Glory to the prince Thogsmed

He accomplished learned works, we are told in the invocation, and saw Maitreya face to face:

/ nags chal nañ du dkaḅ (!) thub mjad⁹ /
 / byams pa'i žal gzigs bstan bčos breams /
 / thog pa med pa žes bya ba'i /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Thogpamedpa
 Who accomplished learned works, saw Maitreya,
 Was an ascetic in the woods

This "unhindered" or "all-penetrating" man is certainly identical with the rgyal bas luñ bstan 'phags pa thogs med žabs

mentioned by Grünwedel¹ or the Mahāyāna-teacher Asaṅga in the first half of the fourth century. Tāranātha says he was a brother of Vasubandhu² and conjured up Maitreya.³ By the same author we are informed that the saint had many incarnations as a woman. According to Buston he dwelt in the cave of the mountain called "Cockfoot-mountain" (Kukkuṭapādaparvata).³ — A vision of Maitreya is depicted in our scroll.

He is not in the "stories" nor in the usual lists of siddhas. Tāranātha says that tantrism was secretly transmitted from the time of Asaṅga to that of Dharmakīrti.⁴ In the Pantheon of the 300 Asaṅga is called "sa gsum brñes pa". The Tangyur, as well as the Sādhnamālā, attributes works to him.⁵ In a beautiful picture from bKraśislhunpō he is shown sitting, his right hand on a book.⁶ There is said to be a bronze effigy of him in the great temple of Lhasa.⁶

⁴ l.c.

⁵ Cf. Sādhnamālā II XCIV ff.

⁷ Vasubandhu is seemingly absent in our scrolls. In the Čhalugs (Excursus II), where Thogsmed is missing, Vasubandhu's name occurs twice. Asaṅga's original name was Vasubandhu.

hands hold dark brown rosary with three blue beads

NA PA TA = NA TA PA

The male of this couple is called "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob na pa ta la na mo

Glory to the siddha Napa

From the litany we learn something of his ascetic achievements:

/ dpal gyi ri la bskor ba mjad /
 / o rgyan gnas su dka b thub byas /
 / na ta pa zes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Natapa
 Who was an ascetic in Orgyan
 Who made pradakṣina around the Noble Mountain

An Orgyan-Natapa is enumerated as number 14 in the rjesgnañbyachul.¹ Tāranātha knows of a brahmin Napa.² The dPalgyiri is famous because the great founder of the Mahāyāna, Nāgārjuna, died here.³

² Tāranātha, Chos'byun 11.

³ Cf. M. Walleser, Die Lebenszeit des Nāgārjuna. Zeitschrift für Buddhismus. 1925, 95 ff., 237 ff.

GLIÑ BU PA = GLIÑ BU MKHAN

The inscription calls him "siddha":

grub thob gliñ bu pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Glinbupa

From the invocation we learn that he was blessed by Hevajra:

/ o ta pa yi gcug lag tu /
 / dgyes pa rdo rjes byin gyis brlabs /
 / gliñ bu mkhan zes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Glinbumkhan
 Blessed by dGyespardorje
 In the science of Otapa

This siddha "flute-master" I have not found in other sources. Hevajra is one of the best known yidams. He plays an important part in the conversion of the mongols.

This grim-visaged man is given the title "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob pa ra su la na mo

Glory to the siddha Parasu

In the litany we are told that he was an ascetic in "Bhagala" and beheld the Thugsdam in rDorjegdan:

/ bha ga la ru dka' thub mjad² /
 / rdo rje gdan du thugs dam gzigs /
 / sa ra pu zes bya ba yi³ /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Sarapu
 Who saw the Thugsdam in rDorjegdan
 Who was an ascetic in Bhagala

I have not found this siddha in other sources. — The third Dalailama includes a "rcibs logs dañ" (Pārśva) in his list of holy men. Pārśva was the name of Āśvaghoṣa's teacher. In the Tangyur we find a Śarī'ibu.¹ Possibly our siddha Sarapu — this form ought to be considered the better one — might be the mKhanpo Śrī Śāriputramahāsvāmin of Vajrāsana found in the Tangyur as the author of "sgrol ma u gra'i mchod pa'i cho ga zes bya ba".² If so we might suspect the sGrolma of being his Thugsdam. According to Cordier he is supposed to be identical with a slobdpon rDorjegdanpa bSodsnoms pa.

² Cordier III 183 (vol. 82, 25).

³ Oslo Tangyur: bharṇ ga la ru = sa ra ha —, the next (82):

o-rgyan gnas kyi dur khrod du / mkha' 'gro ma yis byin gyis brlabs / sa ra su ka zes bya ba'i /
 bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

KA LA DA KE = KA LA DA GE

This man in the centre, who has a very "tantric" appearance, is called "siddha" in the inscription:

grub thob ka la da ke la na mo

Glory to the siddha Kaladake

He was blessed by the Red gŚinrje the litany tells us:

/ bha ga la yi byañ śar du / / gśin rje dmar pos byin gyis brlabs /
 / ka la da ge žes bya ba'i² /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Kaladage
 Blessed by the Red gŚinrje
 In the north-east of Bhagala

Tucci in list number 3 in Tibetan Painted Scrolls gives his name as Kalaña. The identity of this siddha is doubtful to me. The same Thugsdam that is painted in the upper right-hand corner seems to appear in a picture reproduced by Grünwedel and to represent the tantric gYunstonrdorjedpal in the act of conjuring up Mahākāla.¹

¹ Grünwedel, Mythologie 57. — gśin rje is Yama, the god of death. He is absent in the whole Sādhanamālā, where Yamari-Yamantaka seems to have taken his place. Nevertheless it was gśin rje whom bCoñkhapa appointed to be a guardian of the Faith. In our picture he is standing on a bull, carrying the skull-stick in his right hand, and the cup in his left. Usually the Red Yama carries the wish-granting jewel in his right hand. Yama is seen frequently in thaṅkas representing prelates of the Yellow Church. Both Yama and Yamī appear in rGyud XIV 25 and XIX 12 of the Kangyur.

² Oslo Tangyur (83): ka la lañ ge.

BHA YI NI = BHA YA NI

The inscription contains neither title, nor invocation — formula, merely the name:

bha yi ni

Bhayini

According to the litany he beheld Khasarpaṇi and led an ascetic life in the Seṅldeñ-wood:

/ seṅ ldeñ nags la dka' thub mjad /

/ khar sa pa ṇi thugs dam gzigs /

/ bha ya ni žes bya ba yi /

/ bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /

I bow down to the lama

Called Bhayani

Who saw the Thugsdam Kharsapaṇi

Who was an ascetic in the Seṅldeñ-wood

I have not found a siddha Bhayani or Bhayini in other sources. But the name of the siddha Vyāli — number 84 of the "Geschichten" is rendered Bhyari, Bhalipa, Bhuripa and Byanipa.¹ They might be identical, though there are few points common to the story and the litany. Khasarpaṇi is known as one of the revealers of the "phyag rgya čhen po'i brda'i brgyud pa'i glu".² One of the Sthaviras is called Seṅldeñnagspa and among the authors in the Tangyur we find a Nagskyirinčhen and a Nagskyirinpoche.³

³ Cf. Grünwedel, Mythologie 57 and n. 36. — A work called "seṅ ldeñ nags kyi sgrol ma'i thabs", Cordier III 253 (vol. 86, 22) gives no author, Cf. l.c. III 267 (vol. 87, 22). — L.c. III 179 (vol. 82, 15).

MI RTOG PA = ME TOG PA

The inscription calls this rather "tantric-looking" man with the naked śakti "siddha":

grub thob mi rtog pa la na mo

Glory to the siddha Mirtogpa

He seems to have dwelt in a cemetery and to have subdued a king in Magadha:

/ ma ga dha ru rgyal po btul¹ /
 / dur khrod gnas su rol pa mjad /
 / me tog pa žes bya ba yi /
 / bla ma de la phyag 'chal lo /
 I bow down to the lama
 Called Metogpa
 Who frolicked in the cemetery,
 Subdued a king in Magadha

I have not found a Metogpa in other sources.² "metog" means "flower" and this makes one think of the siddha Vyāli whose story is number 84 of the "Geschichten". This story, however, says nothing of Magadha, of a cemetery, or of the subjugation of a king. The hero of the story is probably identical with the author Bhalipa in the Tangyur.³ The subjugation of a king is a performance not very rare in legends of holy men. It was done by Dharmapa and Abhayākara and others.⁴

¹ The Tangyur preserved in Marburg has: brtul.

² A king Metog in Central India is mentioned by Sumpa mKhanpo 102 and Tāranātha, Čhos'byuñ 159.

RDO RJE GDAN PA

The inscription calls him "lama", a title conferred only on two persons in our series:¹

bla ma rdo rje gdan pa la na mo

Glory to the lama rDorjegdān pa

Our litany contains no invocation for rDorjegdān pa, but at the end we find the following statement:

/ grub thob brgyad ču rca bži'i gsol 'debs /
 / bla ma rdo rje gdan pas mjad pa rjogs so /
 These are the prayers for the Eighty Four Siddhas
 Composed by the lama rDorjegdān pa

I think we may safely conclude as to their identity. It was probably the first illustrator who made him the 85th siddha of this series.

Tāranātha knows of three sages in Buddhagayā called rDorjegdān pa-Vajrāsana. In the "rjes gnañ... thob brgyud" of the "thob yig gsal ba'i me loñ" of Jaya Pañḍita three Vajrāsana are enumerated between Jetāri and the Bari-locaba Rinčhengrags; the line of transmission is: sañs rgyas rdo rje 'chañ — phyag na rdo rje — je tā ri — dgra las rnam rgyal — rdo rje gdan pa che 'brin čuñ gsum — ba ri lo ca ba rin čen grags — sa čen kun sñiñ —. This passage places them before the Bari-locaba. The Tibetan index of the copy of the Tangyur preserved in Paris mentions the author rDorjegdān pa, by Cordier hesitatingly identified with Ratnākaragupta, in connection with the work "gnod sbyin ma kun nas 'khyil pa'i sgrub thabs kyi don bsdus pa'i 'grel pa". This work was transmitted from Klugrub to rDorjegdān pa who handed it on to the Bari-locaba (= Rinčhengrags).¹

A rDorjegdān pa received the work "byin gyis brlabs pa'i nag po čen po'i gsañ ba'i sgrub thabs" from Āryadeva and handed it on to Khyuñpo rNaI'byorpa; this rDorjegdān pa is by Cordier identified with the above mentioned Śāriputramahāśvāmin, Cordier III 201—202 (vol. 82, 96). The author is Nāgabodhi. Also a rDorjegdān pa who composed the "gtum po khro bo čen po'i sgrub thabs" is by Cordier identified with Śāriputramahāśvāmin, Cordier III 192—193 (vol. 82, 66).

According to the colophon of the "mañḍala gyi čho ga" Cordier III 93—94 (vol. 72, 57) the author called "dños grub slob dpon mkhas pa rin čen 'byuñ nas sbas pa" (= Ratnākaragupta) is also known as "dge ba'i bśes gñen rdo rje gdan pa"; the Tibetan index gives: rdo rje gdan par grags pa rin čen; the translator is Dharmakīrti.

A "dpal rdo rje gdan gyi sgrub thabs" without the name of the author is recorded Cordier III 21 (vol. 71, 97) and the great Atiśa composed a "rdo rje gdan gyi rdo rje'i glu'i 'grel pa", Cordier II 46 (vol. 13, 43).

A dñosgrubbrñes pa slob dpon mkhaspa Rinčhen'byuñ gñas sbas pa or Vajrāsana composed Cordier III 351 (vol. 33, 64) translated by Dharmakīrti.

EXCURSUS II

This treatise is found in the Tangyur, preserved in Copenhagen (Narthang-edition?) volume Go 123, or 211 according to the numeration of the Royal Library in Copenhagen. The volume was not available when I read the proofs. I give the corresponding names in the rJesgnañbyachul. The Tangyur preserved in Oslo (Derge-edition) has no Sanskritequivalents. The title mentions eighty mahāsiddhas only. Other important differences are noted.

Title

// grub thob brgyad ču rca bži'i čha lugs In what way the 84 Mahāsiddhas are to be
'jin chul bžugs so // represented
Oslo Tangyur: grub thob brgyad ču'i mñon par rlogs pa bžugs.

Beginning

// rdo rje sems dpa' la phyag 'chal lo // I bow down to Vajrasattva
Oslo Tangyur: / thams čad mkhyen pa la phyag 'chal lo /

lu yi pa du ba'i mdog čan skyes pa dañ ldan Luyipa, with a smoke-coloured skin, gčig pa'o (1) in the company of a man

This Luyipa is identical with the mahāsiddha number 1 of the stories translated by Grünwedel and number 3 of the litany and our scrolls in Stockholm.

li la pa ser po bud med dañ lhan čig pa'o (2) Lilapa, yellow and in the company of a woman

The name is not certain. If right, he is identical with number 2 of rJesgnañbyachul.

3 gu bi ru pa mdog dkar po bud med dañ lhan Gubirupa, white-coloured and in the company čig pa'o (3) of a woman

The rJesgnañbyachul has as number: ku si ri pa, the Oslo Tangyur: ku bi ru pa.

4

dhiñ gi pa mdag (=mdog) ser po bud med Dhiñgipa, yellow-coloured and in the com-dañ lhan gčig pa'o (4) pany of a woman

The name is not certain. rJesgnañbyachul has: dom ki pa. Oslo Tangyur: deñ gi pa.

klu grub — na ga rju na — gur gum gyi mdog čan bud med dañ lhan gčig pa'o (5)

Klugrub — Nagarjuna — saffron-coloured and in the company of a woman

The "gloss" Nagarjuna is here as in several cases written not in the same line as the other text concerning this mahāsiddha but beneath the name on the next line, and in the middle of the text concerning another mahāsiddha. Oslo Tangyur: klu sgrub žabs gur —.

ka kha ya la pa kha dog dkar po skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa'o (6)

Kakhayalapa with a white skin and in the company of a woman

mcho skyes rdo rje — bajra sa ra si — mdog ser po žabs gyon phyed dkruñs kyi gar čan
bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (7)

mChoskyesrdorje — Vajrasarasi — yellow-coloured, drawing in the left leg in dancing-fashion and in the company of a woman

The same name occurs as number 6 in the rJesgnañbyachul. Oslo Tangyur: — kruñ gi —.

za ñal 'čhag — bu su ku — mdog sña ljañ dge sloñ gi gzugs skyes pa dañ ldan gčig pa (8)

Zañal'čhag — Busuku — bluish green-coloured in the shape of a dGesloñ and in the company of a man

He occupies number 7 in the rJesgnañbyachul.

sa¹ ra ha pa mdog ser po bśam gtan gyi phyag
rgya čan bud med dañ ldan gčig pa (9)

Sarahapa, yellow-coloured, with the mudrā of contemplation and in the company of a

The "jim" might be an original "sgra bčan 'jin". Number 8 in the rJesgnañbyachul is called "sa ra ha".

ri khrod pa — śa ra pa — du ba'i mdog čan skyes pa dañ ldan gčig pa (10)

Rikhrodpa — Śarapa — with a smoke-coloured skin and in the company of a man

His sanskrit name is somewhat misspelled: śa ra pa > śa ra ba > śa ba ra. The rJesgnañbyachul contains "ri khrod pa" as number 9.

sgeg pa'i rdo rje — bajra siṅgara — mdog ser po rdo rje dril bu'i phyag rgya čan bud med dañ lhan čig pa (11)

Cf. Mahāvyutpatti 5036: sgeg pa = cṛṅgāra.

sGegpa'irdorje — Bajra siṅgara — yellow-coloured, showing the rDorjedrilbu-mudrā
and in the company of a woman

He is the sGegpa'irdorje number 10 in the rJesgnañbyachul. Sarat Chandra Das gives as equivalents for "sgeg pa'i rdo rje": lāvaṇyavajra and lilavajra.

dha ri ka pa mdog ser po skyes pa dañ ldan
gčig pa (12)

Dharikapa, yellow-coloured and in the company of a man

Dharikapa appears as number 11 in the rJesgnañbyachul. Oslo Tangyur: dā ~.

ye šes žabs — jñā na pā da — dge sloṅ kha dog dkar po skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa (13)

Yešesžabs — Jñānapāda — a dGesloṅ, white-coloured and in the company of a man

A "ye šes žabs dge sloṅ" appears as number 12 in the rJesgnañbyachul.

o rgyan ṇa ta pa nag po bud med dañ lhan
čig p (14)

Orgyan-Ņatapa, black, and in the company
of a woman

The rJesgnañbyachul has as number 13 "ut tta ta pa" (uttapta). Oslo Tangyur: u ṇḍa ta pa.

tha ga pa — tan tra la — ser po bud med dañ
lhan gčig pa (15)

Thagapa — Tantrala — yellow, and in the company of a woman

The "weaver" we find as number 14 in the rJesgnañbyachul. As we find a weaver number 66, our number 15 may be misspelled (Tantrapa?).

padma rdo rje — padma bajra — kar šam žabs gyas brgyad gyon phyed dkruṅs kyi bar gyis bžugs pa bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (16)

Padmardorje — Padmabajra — white hued (?), sitting crosslegged, and in the company
of a woman

The same name occurs in the rJesgnañbyachul (15). Kar šam = in a white gown? Cf. Blue Annals I 278. The Oslo-Tangyur: — dkar — kruṅ gi —.

dbyig gñen — ba su ban dhu — rja gser po'i mdog čan dge sloñ čhos kyi 'khor lo'i phyag rgya čan skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa (17)

dByiggñen — Basubandhu — golden-coloured clay, a dGesloñ, with the dharmacakra-mudrā, and in the company of a man

Cf. number 38! rJesgnañbyachul has "dbyig gi gñen po" (16). The Oslo-Tangyur: — rja gsar —.

ja lan dha ra mdog ñer ba dañ mchuñs pa gar gyi žabs čan bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (18)

Jalandhara, colour like red pepper (?), dancing and in the company of a woman

This mahāsiddha is mentioned as number 17 in the rJesgnañbyachul. Oslo Tangyur: jā ~.

čhos kyi grags pa — dharma kirti — gur gum gyi mdog čan dge sloñ gyi dgyes pa skyes pa
dañ lhan gčig pa (19)

Čhoskyigragspa — Dharmakīrti — saffron-coloured, a dGesloñ and in the company of a man

This "siddha" appears as number 18 in the rJesgnañbyachul. dgyes ' : bgyis? Oslo Tangyur: — dges —.

bu ba pa² — [gha . . .] ser po bud med dañ
ldan gčig pa (20)

Bubapa — [gha . . .] yellow, and in the company of a woman

A Bhupapa appears as number 19 in the rJesgnañbyachul. The equivalent is badly damaged.

² = ñu bo po? du ba = dhū ma? The Oslo-Tangyur: bu la ser —.

ka śi ri pa — bžeñs pa — gur gum gyi mdog čan bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (21)

Kaśiripa — erect — saffron-coloured and in the company of a woman

The same name occurs in rJesgnañbyachul (20). Oslo-Tangyur: — bžeñs pa'i —.

tog rce pa — kha ni tam — ljañ kha skyes pa
dañ lhan gčig pa (22)

Togrcepa — Khanitam — green-coloured and in the company of a man

He is certainly identical with number 21 in the rJesgnañbyachul. According to Turner "Khanti" is a small digging instrument in Nepalese, Sk. Khanitram, Pk. Khañitta.

i ntra bhuti rgyal po'i gyiñ bag gis bžugs pa
sño ljañ bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (23)

Intrabhuti sitting after the manner of a king (?), bluish-green and in the company of a woman

He occupies number 22 in the rJesgnañbyachul.

na ga bo dhi — klu'i byañ čhub cog pus gnas pa spyir do phan skra'i phyag rgya čan nag po skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa (24)

Nagabodhi — Klu'ibyañčhub — crouching, hair on the head hanging,³ black and in the company of a man

We find the same name as number 24. Oslo-Tangyur: nag po pa... spyi bor phregs sgra'i phyag etc.

³ ? — The text is not easily legible. Possibly: Dictionnaire: do ke, do ker = capilli supra caput nodati, phan rgyan čha = ornamenta pensilia. — In the legend N. grew horns by meditation. As Mr.
Wayman kindly informed me the Derge-edition has: spyi bor phregs sgra'i; phyag rgya = mudrā, horn = tib. rva, ru.

pra bha ka ra pâ da — 'od gzer žabs — rja gser gyi mdog čan ra lti⁴ bsnams pa bud med
dañ lhan gčig pa (25)

Prabhakarapāda — 'Odgzeržabs — golden coloured clay, holding a sword and in the company of a woman

While our Tibetan name omits "kara" rJesgnañbyachul calls number 25: 'od mjad žabs. So does Oslo-Tangyur continuing: rja gsar etc.

⁴ ra lti = ral gri ? So Oslo-Tangyur.

ma ka na ŋi pa sño ljañ skyes pa dañ lhan
gčig pa (26)

Makanaŋpa, bluish green and in the company of a man

The rJesgnañbyachul has: ya ka pa dri pa. Oslo-Tangyur: ma ga na ŋi pa.

dom bi pa dkar šam stag gi smad steñ na bžugs pa bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (27)

Ḍombipa, white-hued, mounted on a tiger's back and in the company of a woman

"dom bhi pa" number 27 is called in the rJesgnañbyachul. Cf. n. 16.

thod pa čan — ka pa li — dkar šam skyes pa

Thodpačan — Kapali — white-hued, and

dañ lhan gčig pa (28)

with a man

The identical name is found as number 28 in the rJesgnañbyachul.

29

la ba pa — la ba pa rabs pa — rja gs(e)r gyi mdog čan bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (29)

Labapa — Labaparabspa — the colour of yellow clay and with a woman

Another Labapa we shall meet as number 65. Number 29 in the rJesgnañbyachul is called: lva ba pa. "lva ba" = kambala. Oslo Tangyur: la ba pa la ba bsname pa (holding a cloth) rja —.

30

ti lo pa nag po bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (30)

Tilopa, black and with a woman

"tai lo pa" is the name of number 30 in the rJesgnañbyachul.

31

mar me mjad — di pañ ka ra — dkar šam gžon nu'i čha byad čan bud med dañ lhan
gčig pa (31)

Marmemjad — Dipaṅkara — white, young-looking, and with a woman

Number 56 will show us a "di ba ka ri". Number 31 in the rJesgnañbyachul is "mar me mjad".

32

dge gñen zla ba — can tra pa sa ka — sño ljan po ti'i phyag rgya čan bud med dañ lhan gčig pa'o (32)

dGegñenzlaba — Cantrapasaka — bluish green poti-mudrā, and in the company of a woman

The man is called dge bsñen zla ba in the rJesgnañbyachul and in the Oslo Tangyur.

33 ra bu ta nag po skyes pa bud med dañ lhan

gčig pa (33)

Rabuta, black, in the company of a man and a woman

This man appears with exactly the same name and the same number in the rJesgnañbyachul, as "ra pu ta" in the Oslo Tangyur.

34 dga' ba'i rdo rje — ra ta bajra — skyes pa

dañ lhan gčig pa (34)

dGa'ba'irdorje — Ratavajra — in the company of a man

The same man and the same number are met with in the rJesgnañbyachul, where the mahāsiddha is said to be of a yogi's appearance: rnal 'byor pa'i čha byad čan.

Detail of thangka XII

Detail of thangka XII

Two pages from Tangyur preserved in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris

ka do la pa — phyag sloñ ba'i snod čan skyes

The same number, name, and description are found in the rJesgnañbyachul.

čag lham mkhan — lo ha rupa na ka ra — dkar po bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (36)

Čaglhammkhan — Loharupanakara — white
and in the company of a woman

Number 36 in the rJesgnañbyachul is called: lčags lham mkhan, which probably is the better form. As equivalent for "mčhil lham mkhan" Grünwedel gives in story number 79 "panaha". Our Sanskrit-word is probably meant to be: loha + upānat + kara. Oslo-Tangyur: lbags lham mkhan.

pa ga la pa pa nag po bžeñs phyag na bum pa bsnams pa skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa (37)

Pagalapapa, black, erect, holding a bumpa and in the company of a man

His name as number 37 in the rJesgnañbyachul is: pā ga la pa. Oslo-Tangyur: pa ga la pa.

ba su ban dha pa gyas duñ gyab gyon pas

Damchigrdorje — Bajrapama(ya) — holding a nectar-skullcup, bluish-green, and in the company of a woman

The name is Vajrasamaya. Number 40 in rJesgnañbyachul carries the same name. The "e-stroke" in "med" is missing.

41

lče spyañ žabs — jam bū ka pā da — rja gsar gyi mdog čan skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa (41)

lčespyañžabs — Jambukapāda — earth-
coloured and in the company of a man

This same "jackal-man" occupies number 41 in rJesgnañbyachul. Oslo Tangyur: če —.

42

kar nag po sño ljañ bud med dañ lhan gčig
pa (42)

Karnagpo, bluish-green, and in the company
of a woman

"kar nag po" may be read "ka ra nag po". In rJesgnañbyachul we find: ka rna pa. Oslo-Tangyur: ka ra na pa.

43

dha mu pa phyag na rña 'jin pa nag po skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa (43)

Dhamupa, holding a drum in his hand, black, and with a man

44 dha ma pa ser po bžeñs pa bud med dañ lhan

čig pa (44)

Dhamapa, yellow, erect and in the company
of a woman

The names of number 43 and number 44 are rendered "Dhamupa" and "Dhumapa" in the rJesgnañbyachul.

45 ku ma ri pa gžon nu'i gzugs dañ kha dog čan

bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (45)

Kumaripa, a young man's shape and colour-ring, and in the company of a woman

(47)

Kupajipa, saffron-coloured, holding a skull-cup, and in the company of a man

We find the same name as number 47 in the rJesgnañbyachul.

rin čhen myu gu — ratnakura — rin po čhe'i bu ram⁵ bsnams pa sño ljañ bud med dañ
lhan gčig pa (48)

Rinčhenmyugu — Ratnakura — seizing a jewelled globe bluish green, and with a woman

Number 48 in the rJesgnañbyachul has the same name.

⁵ bu ram = guḍaḥ, Mahāvvyutpatti 5696 (15). Ratnakura : Ratnāṅkura. Oslo-Tangyur: phur ma bsnams.

ral gri grub pa — khaḍga siddhi — nag po ral gri dañ lhuñ bzed kyī phyag rgya čan bgreñ pa skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa (49)

Ralgrigrubpa — Khadgasiddhi — black, with sword and alms-bowl, erect and with a man

Number 49 in the rJesgnañbyachul has the identical name.

dha ki pa rja gsar gyi mdog čan rja rña bzuñ ba bud med dañ lhan gčig pa (50)

Dhakipa, earth-coloured(?),⁶ holding a drum
and in the company of a woman

Number 50 in the rJesgnañbyachul is called: dha sa ki pa.

⁶ As Mr. Wayman kindly informed me, the Lhasa Dictionary by dGedśes Čhosgrags has: rja rña čhen po) — = rña čhen po'am rña'i bye brag rja rña kha čig pa)
and: rja phor = sa'i kham por thus: rja = sa, — rja gsar = fresh earth ?, or: ~ gser = yellow earth ?

ku ma ru pa gar gyi žabs čan dkar po skyes

together with a woman

Sk. tṛṇa — grass. The rJesgnañbyachul calls number 52: tan ta pa, Oslo-Tangyur: ten ta na pa.

spyod pa pa — ča rgya pa — gur gum gyi mdog čan 'greñ ba bud med dañ lhan gčig
pa (53)

sPyodpapa — Čargyapa — saffron-coloured, erect and in the company of with a woman

(Jäschke notes: spyodpapa — dpyodpapa — mīmāṃsaka.) — The same name occurs as number 5 in the rJesgnañbyachul. — Mahāvvyutpatti gives: spyod pa pa = mīmāṃsaka (3517) and spyod pa = caryā (363 etc. etc.).

54

ko lpags mkhan — carmakara — lag śa⁷ bzuñ ba skyes pa dañ lhan gčig pa (54)

Kolpagsmkhan — Carmakara — holding a hide in his hand, and with a man

ko lpags — leather. The rJesgnañbyachul has: ko las mkhan, Oslo-Tangyur: ko blas mkhan. Cf. Mahāvvyutpatti 3795 and 9328.

⁷ śa = chavi, Mahāvvyutpatti.

55

kun ba žabs — sa ma ni gta sa pā da — gur gum gyi mdog čan bud m(e)d dañ lhan gčig

EXCURSUS III

Scroll in the possession of the author

This scroll was purchased in Patan, Nepal, 1955. It is certainly of Tibetan origin. Possibly it once formed part of a larger scroll. Especially the scene with the animals is rather finely executed.

The centre is occupied by a man sitting on a tiger skin spread over a seat. An orange nimbus designs him as a holy man. He wears bone-ornaments, and is pointing at the sun. This seems to denote an incident in the mahāsiddha Virūpa-Bīrvapa's life: when in need of something valuable as a payment for ale he commands the sun to stand still, and gives her away as a pawn. He is, however, not the only siddha who performs this act. It is also recorded among the great Padmasambhava's deeds.
